AMERICANS ROUTING NAZIS IN SWEEP SOUTH

Costly 'Breath of Fresh Air'

Atlantan, Ill., Leans From Car, Dies as Head Strikes Tree

A "breath of fresh air" cost Robert (Bob) Davis, 28, of 285 Alaska avenue, N. E., his life early yesterday when he leaned from the window of a moving automobile in front of 866 South Boulevard and struck his head against a tree.

His death marked the 18th traffic fatality this year, compared to 14 for the same period of 1943.

Pvt. Elmo L. Demmon, of the U. S. Marine Corps, driver of the auto, told Patrolmen M. B. Hogue and R. S. Strubling that they were going north on Boulevard when Davis suddenly complained of feeling ill and leaned out of the rear window.

Demmon swerved to the curb to see what was wrong, he said, and as he did so, Davis' head struck a tree. Officers said the victim's head hit a tree in front of 866 Boulevard, S. E., and that the car stopped in front of 850 Boulevard, 100 feet away.

When police first arrived at the scene, they reported finding Davis propped up against the automobile in a sitting position. Demmon and his wife were standing nearby.

Taken into custody, Pvt. Demmon and his wife told Detectives J. E. Helms and W. M. Holland that they had been out near the airport to visit friends. On the way back, they said, Davis complained of not feeling well and asked Demmon to drive.

Demmon and his wife later were released, pending a hearing before Mrs. Paul Doneho, Fulton county coroner, at 10 a. m. today.

Funeral arrangements for Davis will be announced by Yarn Brothers.

Thousands See Soldier Die in Air Crash Here

An enlisted man was killed and a flying officer critically injured yesterday in an airplane crash at the Atlanta Army Air Base.

The accident happened at approximately 5:30 p. m., 10 minutes after an announcement that an open house at the base, which between 4,000 and 5,000 persons attended, was over and the public was requested to clear the field.

Names of the crash victims were withheld pending official notification of relatives.

According to a statement issued at the base, the plane was an L-3, a cub type powered by a 75-horsepower motor and used in liaison work. The plane, on a local flight, was piloted by the officer and the enlisted man was a passenger. The officer was attached to the base.

STALLED ON TAKEOFF

The plane stalled on the takeoff and fell at the west end of the east-west runway, the statement added. No other details were disclosed.

The tragedy climaxed an exciting day for civilians who journeyed to the base for the open house, in observance of the 37th anniversary of the Army Air Forces. A special thrill was given spectators when two B-29 Superfortresses "buzzed" the field.

Crowds thronged the field all afternoon, streaming out onto the ramp where they inspected the latest in Army Air Forces airplanes all the way from the P-47 to the B-17.

CHEMICAL DEMONSTRATION

The Base Chemical Warfare section demonstrated the uses of various types of smoke and incendiary bombs, in addition to setting off light charges of TNT.

A large crowd of spectators sat on a hill overlooking the runways and divided their attention between watching a P-47, a P-51 and two B-29's "buzz" the field, and listening to the 47-piece all-girl Victory band directed by Perry Bechtel, of Atlanta.

A short speaking program included talks by the commanding officer of the field, Col. Allison J. Hollifield; Jack Gray, manager of the municipal airport, and Lt. Col. Charles S. Carter, air liaison officer of the Fourth Service Command.

Lt. George A. Prussing, AAAB public relations officer, was master of ceremonies.

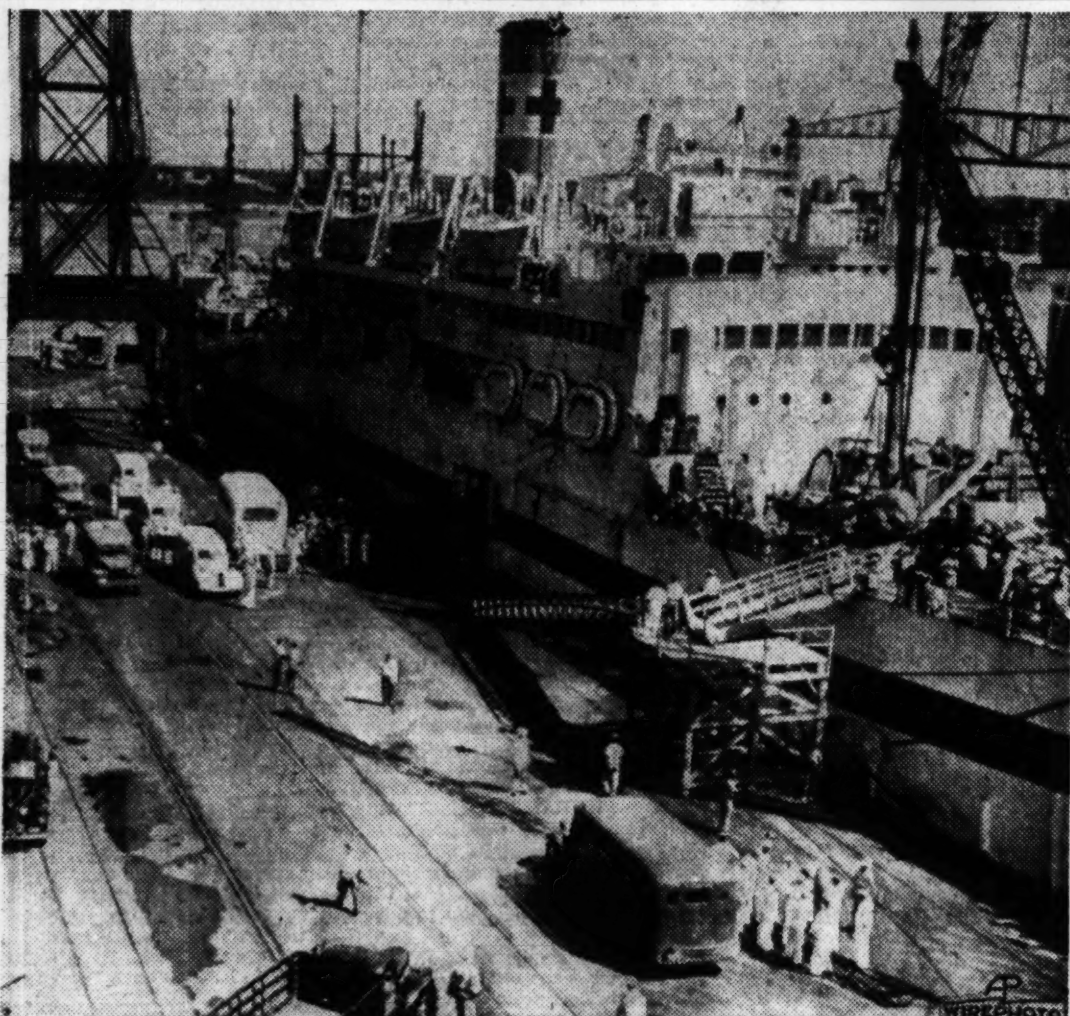

Chaplains Await Stork;

Expected in Few Days

HOLLYWOOD, July 30.—(AP)—Charlie Chaplin and his fourth wife, Oona O'Neill, daughter of playwright Eugene O'Neill, expect a visit from the stork within a few days. Her friends say she will go to a hospital tomorrow to await the birth.

The 18-year-old Oona and Chaplin, 54, were married in Carpinteria, Cal., in June, 1943, shortly before Joan Barry sued the movie comedian, naming him as the father of her then unborn daughter.

Chaplin was acquitted of Mann Act charges involving Miss Barry.

DISCHARGES D-DAY WOUNDED—Five hundred Navy casualties were discharged from the USS Refuge, Navy hospital ship, at Portsmouth, Va., yesterday, many of them victims of D-Day fighting. The ship also put ashore 105 Army wounded.

Seven Injured As Fleeing Car Hits 2 Others

Following a wild chase through Hapeville and southwest Atlanta last night, an automobile in which police said two Negroes were speeding at 80 miles an hour, side-swiped a car containing two boys and then ploughed head-on into a third automobile in which six other persons, all members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Melton S. Beck, of 1444 West Wesley road, College Park, were driving south on Stewart avenue.

The scene of the accident was near the Pine Crest tourist camp. The Negroes were seeking to escape two Hapeville policemen who were chasing them.

The Negro driver of the speeding car was still unconscious at Grady hospital last night. The six members of the Beck family also are in the hospital, severely injured. The two boys whose car was side-swiped were unhurt.

The identified persons in the accident are:

Melton S. Beck, 27; lacerations of the head and possible knee injuries.

Mrs. Beck, 34; fractured right leg and head and body injuries.

Yvonne Beck, 8 years old, their daughter; head injuries.

Gloria Joan Beck, another daughter, five years old; head injuries.

Donald Beck, 18 months old, head injuries.

Mrs. Te-ana Cater, 76, mother of Mrs. Beck; cuts on face and head and leg injuries.

All of the injured persons are in Grady hospital.

According to F. M. Benefield and R. M. Butler, Hapeville policemen, shortly before the accident they saw an automobile on the Jonesboro road going at 70 miles an hour.

He Was On the Ball—Help Him Make a Call

If you want to do something to help the boys who have done their bit:

If you are looking for a chance to do more than you have already done:

If you want an opportunity to do something that's different—

Well, here's your chance.

You can make a contribution to "HEROES' PHONE CALLS."

This is a fund of which The Atlanta Constitution is a sponsor. To initiate the campaign, The Atlanta Constitution has made a contribution of $250, and the Atlanta Journal has contributed a similar amount.

The newspapers are collecting the money, and the funds they collect are to be turned over intact to the local chapter of the American Red Cross for allocation and disbursement.

The idea back of the fund is to give wounded servicemen, in hospitals in this area, a chance to telephone their loved ones. Each telephone call, it is estimated, will cost $3. All contributions to the fund will go for this purpose.

So, the sponsors of the fund make this request of you—

"Buy a telephone call home for a wounded serviceman."

The need of such a fund is evident to all who are familiar with conditions.

Soldiers evacuated from the fighting fronts all over the world more often than not arrive here without money. A call home, a talk with members of their families, or with their girls, is very often the thing that will do them more good than anything else. Yet, without money, this is the joy that must be denied them.

To remedy that situation is the

New Nightmare for Nips Fearful U. S. Weapon Destroys All Life Within 100 Feet of It

By CLINTON GREEN.

ABOARD EXPEDITIONARY FLAGSHIP OFF TINIAN, MARIANA ISLANDS, July 30.—(AP)—(Via Navy Radio)—One of the most fearful instruments of death from America's arsenal of secret weapons is aiding immeasurably in the whirlwind conquest of Tinian island which saw American Marines storm into Tinian town before darkness tonight.

Effectiveness of the secret weapon has been definitely proved. It is truly fearful and it is extremely doubtful whether any human being within 100 feet of its action would be able to live.

It is easy to foresee the devastation and death which would result from its use on such targets as the crowded cities of the Japanese homeland.

First use of the weapon came several days ago, but because of security reasons it is impossible to even hint at its construction or its manner of use.

The end of the fight for Tinian is in sight. However, the big battle is yet to come. The Marines compressed the remaining Japanese vis-à-vis into an area of approximately two square miles.

Marines of the Second and Fourth divisions swept ahead all day long—as they have done every day since they came ashore—registering a gain of at least a mile and a half and at some points as much as two miles.

Leathernecks were methodically cleaning out enemy nests which formed a still strong rear guard.

Late in the afternoon tanks broke from the advancing Marine lines to probe well beyond Tinian town, which has been reduced to a mass of rubble by six weeks of all-out bombardment.

What the Monsoon did was done over and over again by other Superfortresses which attacked after us. There was nothing the Japanese could do to prevent it. We saw fighters try to reach our high altitude and only turn away under our fire. Antiaircraft fire was mostly low and ineffectual.

For five minutes before the Monsoon started her solo run B-29's singly and in formation had been bombing the sprawling factory district. Two ruddy orange fires already burned there, one marking a bullseye hit.

Anshan was under bombing for about an hour. The last pilot

Atlanta's Heat Wave

Showers late this afternoon may break the heat wave in the Atlanta area, according to the Weather Bureau. Until then, the outlook is for continued hot weather.

The official forecast reads: "Partly cloudy and hot; slight chance of thundershowers late in the afternoon."

The high temperature yesterday was 93 degrees at 3:30 p. m.; the low, 70 degrees at 5:30 a. m.

Biscuit Blast

WASHINGTON, July 30.—

(AP)—It's "biscuit blast" rather than bomb concussion that's causing the greater part of the dental casualties in the Army.

The Army and Navy Journal, reporting that conclusion has been reached by service dentists studying the effect of K rations "on plates and bridges, says they have only one recommendation for the hard-chewing fighting man: "Dunk."

Sudden Red Offensive Liberates 300 Towns

LONDON, Monday, July 31.—(AP)—Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky, 37-year-old Jewish tank expert, yesterday sent his Third White Russian army troops crashing seven miles into the Suwalki triangle of German East Prussia in a sudden powerful offensive which hurled the enemy out of 300 towns and villages on a 68-mile front.

German Flank Ripped Loose on Norman Coast

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Monday, July 31.—(AP)—American armored troops, ripping the German western flank loose from the Normandy coast, were smashing deeply southward today toward Avranches, key to Brittany's side door, after probably the greatest single day's gains since the invasion of France June 6.

While British and Canadian troops on the center of the Normandy front launched and hotly pressed a new offensive that gained as much as a mile an hour, the Americans slammed through Brehal, Gavray and Percy for advances up to seven miles and thrust rapidly onward possibly to double the distance made on the flaming Sabbath.

Exact extent of the swift American surge could not be disclosed, but the armored spearheads, followed by doughboys, appeared to be breaking clear out of the confines of the Normandy peninsula and totally outflanking the German defenses along the whole American-British-Canadian front.

The tanks sped past many pockets of German resistance which the infantrymen who followed were cleaning out methodically.

The bag of prisoners reached 2,000 yesterday, raising the total to more than 10,000 since the American offensive began Tuesday.

The figure was expected to gain treminously when the remaining Germans were dug out of two traps north of Brehal. French villagers tossed flowers to the advancing American, and some joined enthusiastically in the routing out of by-passed Nazis.

An Allied communique said the Germans encircled in the Longronne and St. Denis la Gast areas lost 30 tanks in vain efforts to break out of entrapment, and that a strong German counterattack in the Tassy-sur-Vire sector, near the American east flank, also failed. These tank losses boosted to more than 400 the German tanks destroyed or knocked out since Tuesday.

3d Armored, Georgia Pride, In Normandy

WITH THE AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE, July 30.—(AP)—It was disclosed officially tonight that the Third Armored Division is participating in the great American attack which is sweeping the German army out of Normandy's hedgerows.

It shared with another armored outfit credit for the envelopment of Coutances and for driving of the first steel wedge across to the sea to entrap the first layer of Nazis retreating from the Lessay-St. Lo area.

It was the first time the division had seen combat.

The Third Armored—its motto is "Always dependable"—was activated April 15, 1941, at Camp Beauregard, La. Most of its men came from Illinois, Michigan, Texas, Wisconsin, Missouri, Georgia, Minnesota, Iowa and Louisiana—each of these states being represented by more than 400 soldiers.

Left Gunner, Cpl. Clarence R. Hazleton, 38, who used to stalk deer in his (St. Mary's) Pennsylvania hills home, spotted a Japanese tank and fired a 50-caliber burst. But Oscar was too far away and we soon lost him.

Right Gunner, Cpl. George D. Smith, 21, Baton Rouge, La., who once hunted ducks in the bayous around his birthplace of Vacherie, had been looking down out of his heavy glass blister. Smitty called out the direct hits for the Monsoon's bombs.

That was at 11:11 a. m. We had flown the first half of an approximately 3000-mile round trip for that moment. It was an all-daylight mission, outdone in this war as the longest daylight bombing mission only by the B-29's which had made a shakedown raid on Bangkok in Thailand June 8. Half the distance to Anshan was over enemy land and water.

"KEEP ON THE BALL!"

The Monsoon had taken off into a red rising sun from a main Superfortress base in western China, as the lead plane of a group operating from that field. In the early dim light, the crewmen had lined up at the nose of the plane for a last-minute check by Maj. Kingsbury.

"This airplane never was in better shape," the major said adding gruffly, "You guys keep on the ball and work together and I'll get you back—every damn one of you."

His curse was a fond benediction.

"Now, let's go and knock the hell out of that target."

Te men said little.

They had heard told this raid had been a top-drawer project for the past year when the B-29 was still a high secret.

The thundering race started down the long runway, and it seemed the plane would never lift. Barton shook his head gravely. Finally the heavily-laden Monsoon parted with the earth.

The hatch was pulled open and we looked out. The Monsoon was barely clearing the treetops. One of the crew closed it, saying maybe if we didn't look it would go away.

MONSOON DAMAGED

When the ship gained altitude, Kingsbury called Barton and me forward out of our positions. We were skimming the Chinese hills at minimum altitude when the major discovered he had lost three of his most important flight instruments—the altimeter, the rate climb gauge and the air speed indicator. For the rest of the flight he and Co-Pilot Brown worked from counterparts of these instruments on the panel.

(A delayed dispatch from the Superfortress base in western China said the Monsoon evidently had raked a treetop on the takeoff, since one part of the plane projecting from the belly was found caved in when it returned to the base. This mishap failed to interfere with the near-perfect functioning of the Monsoon, which

Ike Optimistic As Allies Send Foe Reeling

ADVANCED COMMAND POST, SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, July 30.—(AP)—Gen. Eisenhower is most gratified with the results of the fighting in Normandy during the past week and views the immediate future of the campaign with high optimism.

The supreme commander of the Allied expeditionary force is understood to view the favorable trend of the campaign as proof of the soundness of the policies the Allies have pursued from the beginning—that of proceeding cautiously and getting the bottlenecks out of the way before going ahead.

Gen. Eisenhower conferred briefly yesterday with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley and found them obviously pleased with the progress of the Allied troops in the past few days.

"LEAVES NO GROUNDS for Complaint"

A parallel arrangement, already drafted between the British and the French committee of Gen. de Gaulle, probably will be put into effect at the same time to formalize the present impromptu relations between the French and Allied armies under Gen. Eisenhower.

While the agreement is expected to provide for some military and economic as well as political relationships between the committee and the Anglo-American forces, it will leave to Eisenhower the final determination of all war-connected problems in order to facilitate the drive to smash Germany.

It also will leave the way completely open for the French people to have the final say on selection of a government.

So far, it is reported in diplomatic quarters here, relations between French committee representatives and Allied military leaders in Normandy have been excellent. Much of the success is credited here to Francis Coulet, whom de Gaulle appointed as "commissioner of the French republic" in Normandy.

According to reports reaching here, Coulet has been invariably considerate of the wishes of local populations, in helping restore their local governments, he has maintained order and peace in the communities which are essential to Allied military operations, and although he is a bitter foe of Vichy, he has used restraint in dealing with persons accused of having collaborated with Vichy.

Texas Demos Come to Blows

AUSTIN, Texas, July 30.—(AP)—Texas Democrats came out today from a statewide fight, which in some counties turned to fistfights, with incomplete reports showing 83 delegations instructed to seek Roosevelt-Truman electors and 29 for the present "regular" electors headed for the state convention for a showdown on party control.

Forty-four delegations were un-instructed. Fifty-four of Texas' 26 counties remain to be heard from.

Since each county has convention votes in proportion to those cast for governor in the last general election, the decision of the state convention, Sept. 12, at Dallas on which delegates will be seated may be important in determining strength.

Pro-Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt supporters battled verbally and in Dallas and El Paso with fists as they named delegates to the state gathering in county meetings yesterday.

Control of the Sept. 12 meeting would permit the pro-Roosevelt group to set up the party organization for the next two years and take some action in the matter of electors.

At a rally of the "Jeffersonian Democrats" at Montague yesterday, a resolution was passed "to have our Democratic party back and in this endeavor we admonish Jefferson Democrats to assemble at each and every court house in the nation within the next 30 days and organize."

Dewey Leaves N. Y.; Fish Sues Playwright

NEW YORK, July 30.—(AP)—Gov. Dewey prepared to leave shortly for Pittsburgh where he will hold conferences tomorrow with Pennsylvania Republican leaders. He also will meet with business, labor, and other representatives.

The Republican presidential nominee was to be accompanied by Mrs. Dewey on his trip west, during which he will visit Springfield, Ill., Tuesday and arrive Wednesday in St. Louis for the governor's conference.

Meanwhile, another New York Republican, Rep. Hamilton Fish said that his attorney would bring libel action against playwright Maxwell Anderson and other signers of an anti-Fish political advertisement which was reprinted yesterday in the Nyack, N. Y., Journal-News.

Anderson asked Wendell Willkie to represent him.

PRAYS FOR GABRESKI—Kay Cochran, 20, prays in St. John's Catholic church in Prairie Du Chien, Wis., for the safety of her fiancé, Lt. Col. Francis Gabreski, who is reported missing in action over Europe.

Gabreski's Squadron Stunned Over Loss of 'Ace of Aces'

A U. S. FIGHTER BASE IN ENGLAND, July 30.—(AP)—Things were mighty blue around here after Lt. Col. Francis (Gabby) Gabreski, American ace of aces, failed to return from a mission July 20.

The Oil City, Pa., thunderbolt squadron leader, who had destroyed 28 German planes in the air and three on the ground, was one of the most popular men on the field and all his pals could talk about was the crackup of his plane and the chances of seeing him again.

Hardest hit was S. Sgt. Ralph H. Safford, of Fenwick, Mich., Gabreski's ground crew chief.

"We were sweating the colonel back from that mission more than any of the others because he was just about ready to go home and get married," Safford said.

"When the operations officer told us his plane wouldn't be back, he didn't need to say any more. We were stunned. We hardly could believe it. We felt sure for a couple of days he would pop up somewhere."

"We really did keep his plane in top shape. Our wax job had the guys at other bases big-eyed. We had the plane's surface waxed so well the colonel said he could get 15 more miles an hour out of it. Schacki used to get tired of painting all those swastikas on new ships. They surely looked good."

It was the job of Cpl. Felix Schacki, of Gary, Ind., assistant crew chief, to paint on swastikas representing the planes Gabreski had destroyed.

Safford, a farm worker in peace times, was on the best of terms with Gabreski.

"It will be like starting another life," he mused. "For a while we didn't know what to do with ourselves. There was no plane on the line for us. We felt lost."

Nazi Airforce In Normandy Is 950 Planes

SHAEF, July 30.—(AP)—The German air force opposing the Allied air power in France has shrunk from 4,000 planes to less than 1,000, it was estimated today.

This force, which at the height of its power struck terror in its enemies, has back-tracked across the skies it once called its own under the command of heavy-jowled Field Marshal Hugo Sperrle, a 100 per cent Nazi.

Of approximately 950 craft left to his command, probably no more than half or three-quarters of the total could be put in the sky at once.

As it is, the Allies have information that the enemy's wing-clipped air force is shifting these craft, as well as those of other commands, in a frenzied effort to meet the Allied attacks slashing at all parts of the Reich and occupied territory.

Sperrle's command is composed of two fighter corps, one heavy bomber corps and one anti-shipping corps, embracing ME-109's, FW-190's and 110's, and JU-88's and 410's. There are 500 single-engine fighters and 450 twin-engine craft.

Hit By Train, Carpenter Dies

Funeral arrangements will be announced by A. S. Turner & Sons.

He is survived by his wife; four daughters, Misses Minnie Joe, Billie, Vera Bell and Barbara Jean Forester; two sons, L. J. and John Forester; and his mother, Mrs. John Forester.

Up a Tree—Or Was It a Pole?

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY, July 29.—(Delayed)—(AP)—There was practically chaos in the Fifth Army today.

Gen. Kazimierz Sosnkowski, commander in chief of all the Polish forces in Italy, was coming to visit Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark and no one in the band knew the Polish national anthem.

WAC Cpl. Mary Ann Kosierowski, of Houston, Pa., had an idea. She phoned the Polish liaison officer in Rome and asked him to hum it. Band Leader Warrant Officer William Trumble, of Worcester, Mass., listened, hung up and made his own arrangement.

Gen. Sosnkowski commented politely when he heard it.

Apparently it was a success because he didn't ask "what is it?"

Battle of Flowers

Victory Drive Like Medieval Pageantry

BRÉHAL, France, July 30.—(AP)—Rose-garlanded Sherman tanks, rumbling through lanes of hysterically cheering civilians, cracked the German rearward defenses and rolled southward through this coastal village today as knife-brandishing French youths helped round up hundreds of pocketed and demoralized Nazi troops.

Not since the capture of Ferryville in the Tunisian campaign have American troops received such a heroes' welcome as the French accorded these embattled tankmen.

This long column of armor is decorated from head to foot with red and white roses, and hand-drawn are showered on them by thousands of laughing and weeping men, women and children.

It has been a veritable "battle of flowers," but there has been blood spilled, too, and the whole coastal march is like some colorful pageant from French medieval history.

Ike Commends Negro Troops

ADVANCED COMMAND POST, SHAEF, July 30.—(AP)—Negro troops of an antiaircraft balloon battery and a quartermaster truck company today drew official commendation from Gen. Eisenhower for their work in Normandy since D-Day.

"Your battalion landed in France June 6 under artillery, machinegun and rifle fire," Eisenhower said in a citation to the troops.

"Despite the losses sustained, the battalion carried out its mission with courage and determination and proved an important element of the air defense team. The cheerfulness and devotion of its officers and men have been commented on by personnel of other units. This report is most gratifying to me. I commend you and the officers and men of your battalion for your fine efforts which have merited the praise of all who have observed it."

Eisenhower spoke to the quartermaster company of its landings against intense enemy opposition, and said:

"Nevertheless you salvaged most of your equipment at once and within three days 90 per cent of your vehicles were operating on a 24-hour basis, a scale which was maintained for five weeks. I want you to know that I appreciate your splendid work. Your accomplishments are a source of gratification to me and to your Army commander."

Britain Scores Robot Success

LONDON, July 30.—(AP)—British anti-aircraft units and fighter pilots scored new successes today over the sporadic salvos of robot bombs hurled at southern England and the London area by the Germans, but some of the bombs broke through and caused damage and casualties.

Much of London's population had left the city for a holiday over the weekend. In spite of the improved defenses, reported incidents included robot hits on a children's playground, a Y. M. C. A. building, a hospital and several houses. From these hits, four were seriously injured, all at the Y. M. C. A.

RAF heavy bombers returned to the Pas de Calais coast last night and struck at a supply depot near Watten, where the Germans' massive concrete structure was believed connected with their new threat to fling 10-ton rockets at Britain. More planes crossed the straits tonight in the same direction.

HAVE YOU SEEN OUR MOTHER?—Imogene and Erlene, 13-month-old, red-haired twins of Frances Gregory, who disappeared from her East Point home Thursday, are getting used to being abandoned. Their father left them last January. However, their grandmother, Mrs. A. B. Owens, is taking care of them but admits it's a pretty big job, especially when she's so worried for fear Frances may have met with some mishap.

Youthful Mother Disappears, Leaving 13-Month-Old Twins

Erlene smiles continually but Imogene looks sad and bows her head with the soft fuzz of red curls when anyone starts talking baby talk to her.

The 13-month-old, blue-eyed twins still drink their milk, take their naps, and smile when the little black puppy runs across the porch, but something is missing from their lives. Imogene especially seems to sense that all is not right.

As of Thursday morning the twins have been without a mother. Their father left them last January.

Frances Gregory, 20, their mother, left her mother's home at 511 Pearl street, in East Point, Thursday morning to report for a new job at a West End bakery, and has failed to return.

Frances' mother, Mrs. A. B. Owens, youthful and dark-haired, recalls that her daughter has been in ill health since the birth of the twins and that she attempted suicide several months ago.

"She's been irritable and sad-like ever since her husband left her and the children to go back to his home in Spokane, Wash.," said Mrs. Owens.

Fearing that her daughter has met with some mishap, Mrs. Owens reported the disappearance to Atlanta police yesterday.

"I don't want to give up these babies," Mrs. Owens declared. "But I do need some help in rearing them. I only pray Frances is all right and will come home to help me."

When last seen, Frances was wearing a pink dress and carrying a white uniform wrapped in paper. She has red hair and blue eyes and is five feet two inches tall and weighs 120 pounds.

Southern Rwy. Cooper, J. T. Bond, Dies at 54

J. T. Bond, 54, of 17 Johnson road, N. W., cooper for the Southern Railway Company, was found dead in bed early yesterday.

Mrs. Paul Doneho, Fulton county coroner, said an inquest had been scheduled for this afternoon at Spring Hill.

In addition to his wife, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. George King; two brothers, W. S. and C. C. Bond, of Portsmouth, Va., and two grandchildren.

He was a member of Bolton lodge F. & A. M. and a native of Portsmouth.

GAS STATION BLAZE

Optical Expert Bausch Dies

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 30.—(AP)—Edward Bausch, 89, chairman of the board of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, died at noon today. He had been in failing health for more than a year.

Bausch was one of the first men in America to design and manufacture quality microscopes. A son of John Jacob Bausch, co-founder of the company, he designed and built his first microscope when 18, a year after entering Cornell University.

Despite his advanced years, Bausch was active in planning expansion of the company for demands of the present war.

During World War I he collaborated with the armed forces in the development of military instruments and was successful in enabling the nation to meet one of its most critical emergencies—production of optical glass.

4 Airdromes Blasted On Philippines Route

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Southwest Pacific bombers, sweeping over the airways along Gen. MacArthur's expected return route to the Philippines, smashed four enemy airdromes around northwest New Guinea and strafed the east coast of Halmahera island, midway between New Guinea and the Philippines.

The planes attacked Moemi, Sagan, Otawire and Utrom airstrips, almost nullifying Japan's remaining air strength on New Guinea. MacArthur announced that 2,859 Japanese have been killed since July 11 in the Alape sector of New Guinea, where 5,000 Nipponese are trying to break out of a trap.

U. S. GRIPS APRA HARBOR

Gum's Apra harbor, one of the finest in the western Pacific, was firmly in American hands. U. S. gunboats were patrolling the bay, a potential advanced base from which fleet units could strike at Japan, the Philippines or the China coast and American planes yesterday put Guam's Orote peninsular airfield into operation.

Additional accounts of the Superfortress raid on the industrial district of Anshan, Manchuria, were given by Associated Press War Correspondent Clyde A. Farnsworth, who described it as "a masterpiece of destruction."

"We saw a great part of Japan's facilities for manufacture of iron and steel and related products crumble in a holocaust," he wrote, as dozens of B-29's bombed the sprawling factory district for an hour.

TENGCHUNG FALL NEAR

An American writer declared flatly that the fall of Tengchung, main Japanese base on the China coast of the Burma road front, is "only a matter of time." American-trained Chinese have pierced the inner walls behind which "2,000 battle-weary Japanese face extermination." Four Japanese attempts to break out were repulsed.

Tengchung is 60 miles from Myitkya, key north Burma city, where American and Chinese troops again advanced a few yards. Fall of the two cities will remove major obstacles in linking the Ledo and Burma roads to re-establish supply lines to China.

Little change was reported in the Chinese battle areas. Fierce fighting continued at besieged Hengyang. The Japanese advanced to Ningsiang, 35 miles north of Changsha, to protect a river supply route. Chinese made some local gains.

Conquest of Apra harbor was speeded, with a minimum of casualties, by Americans striking at the flanks of elaborately prepared Japanese defenses. War Correspondent William L. Worden said:

Reports from Turkey said that Japanese had arrived in Istanbul from German-occupied Europe and Berlin, and the Japanese were booking rail passage for Russia where they might return to their homeland. German and Japanese diplomats conferred Friday at the German embassy, it was said.

Cevat Akcalin, Turkish secretary general of foreign affairs, received Von Papen Saturday, it was announced.

Von Papen was said to have made his last proposition to Akcalin in an effort to prevent a complete break. If Turkey would limit her action to an economic break, the Germans would evacuate the Aegean and Dodecanese islands and a strip of territory along the Bulgarian and Greek frontiers facing Turkey, these reports said.

BULGARIA SHAKY
Meanwhile, Germany's satellite, Bulgaria, appeared even shakier in the Axis lineup.

Istanbul quoted a traveler from Sofia as reporting that the Turks and Bulgars were engaged in talks aimed at "preventing hostilities between the two nations in event of a sudden change of position towards Germany."

Bulgaria has been reported negotiating with the Allies on a way out of the war, demanding that Germany withdraw the two Nazi divisions stationed within her borders, and preparing to allow Soviet Russia to reopen her consulates.

Transocean's Ankara correspondent said it was "highly significant that the Turkish fleet was about to hold maneuvers with all Turkish vessels in the Aegean and Black seas" assembled in port.

Reich Predicts Turkish Break

LONDON, July 30.—(P)—A flight of German diplomats from Turkey was reported in Ankara dispatches received tonight and the official German news agency, T.N.B., said the Turkish national assembly would be informed on Wednesday of the government's decision to break diplomatic and economic relations with the Reich.

D.N.B. said it had obtained its information from "Soviet Russian sources" in Sofia and added that Turkey would be asked to grant the Allies facilities for air and naval bases and that Turkey's active participation in the war would come as a matter of course.

Istanbul dispatches said German diplomatic officials in Istanbul had booked rail passage for Sunday or Monday, presumably for Berlin or other destinations in German-occupied Europe.

VON PAPAN MOVES
Another Ankara dispatch said German Ambassador Von Papen began moving his furniture from his private residence to the central German embassy building.

Von Papen's moving, it was said, might indicate, in event of a break, that Turkey planned to recognize the Czechoslovak government.

Turkish newspaper editors had been called to a conference with the government tomorrow, presumably to be informed of the government's plans to break relations.

miles an hour. Two Negroes were in the speeding car. The policemen gave chase and as the car turned into Stewart avenue the driver stepped up the speed to around 80 miles an hour.

ONE FLEES
Near the Pine Crest tourist camp, the speeding car sideswiped the automobile, containing the white boys, then plunged headlong into the Beck car which was coming south on Stewart avenue.

The force of the impact turned the Beck car completely around and wrecked it.

One of the Negroes in the speeding car jumped out and escaped, but the other Negro, the driver of the car, was knocked unconscious.

Two ambulances, one from Grady hospital and the other from Awtry & Lowndes, removed six of the injured persons, including the Negro, to the hospital. At the hospital, after they recovered consciousness, the Becks inquired after the children and then learned that Yvonne was unaccounted for. Police immediately began a search for her and found her wandering around near the vicinity of the accident, in a dazed condition.

At the hospital it was said that the persons in Beck's car, while suffering painful injuries, would probably recover. However, the condition of the Negro is said to be "very serious."

FIVE CONVICTS SAW OUT OF BELLWOOD CAMP
Five convicts who sawed a hole in a wall under a bed in a barracks at the Bellwood county prison camp have escaped from the camp, officials revealed last night.

The barracks was formerly the camp's hospital building. The escapes were listed as Grady Ear, Dave Perkins, Richard Evans, Haskell Green and Homer Castleberry. Records on the men were not available. Bloodhounds were called into action in search for the escapees.

WAVES Stage 'Hell Springs Its Hinges'

WAVES on duty or in training at Navy shore stations throughout the nation yesterday observed the second anniversary of their organization, and at the Atlanta Naval Air Station the occasion was celebrated Saturday night with a birthday dance and a special radio broadcast featuring the station's WAVE chorus.

The dance, for enlisted personnel only, began at 8 p. m. at the gymnasium and was resumed after an interruption at 9:30 p. m., for the broadcast from the station's theater auditorium over WAGA.

For the dance the air station commissary had baked a big birthday cake with two candles, and refreshments included small individual cakes. Music for the celebrants was provided by the Naval Air Station band.

Meanwhile, WAVES on duty at Navy offices in downtown Atlanta celebrated the birthday of the women's reserve in a more informal manner but with no less pride in their branch of the service. At the Office of Naval Officer Procurement the anniversary was marked by the furthering of development of plans to intensify recruitment efforts in Georgia so as to increase the ranks of the WAVES by still more young women from this state.

In two years since the WAVES were created by act of congress, July 30, 1942, their ranks have reached a total of nearly 70,000 women who are releasing Navy men from shore jobs to sea duty, and naval authorities said the service is calling for a total of nearly 100,000 WAVES in uniform by the end of 1944.

WAVES of the U. S. Naval Training School for Storekeepers (Women) at the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville, celebrated the second anniversary of their branch of naval service yesterday with elaborate ceremonies scheduled through the day.

At a special assembly, Third Officer Elaine Annall, of the British WRENS, addressed trainees at 5 p. m., and 60 prominent Milledgeville citizens were guests of the school at evening mess, with an inspection tour for the visitors following "chow."

YOUTH KILLED AT MOODY
By Revolving Propeller
MOODY FIELD, Ga., July 30.—(P)—Pvt. Milburn K. Wattenbarger, 19, of Cleveland, Tenn., was killed here yesterday when accidentally hit by the revolving propeller of a training plane. Lt. Col. H. C. Stelling, commanding officer, announced.

Son of Mrs. Gertrude K. Wattenbarger, of Cleveland, Wattenbarger came to Moody Field June 18 of this year for the on-the-line phase of flying instruction.

was built at the Boeing plant at Wichita, Kan., and bears the serial number 3428.)

After two hours or so in the air, smoke started pouring out from the instrument board. The flight engineer snatched the extinguisher and turned it on the burning wires.

We were flying in close formation with three other B-29's as we headed over the Gulf of Po, but lost them in the soupy sky. According to the briefing, Kingsbury then would have been justified in turning to a secondary target. Only planes in the safety of a formation were supposed to go to Anshan.

"How do you feel about going in alone?" the major asked. I calculated the sort of answer the major wanted and told him I was in favor of it.

We were on the way home from Anshan when Smitty announced on the interphone that half the big bombard still was in the bay. Some mechanical failure had prevented toggling over Anshan. We could never land safely with them so Navigator Perry and Pilot Kingsbury went into a huddle over where to drop them. Over the gulf the navigator and Barton scanned the water for a sign of a shipping target and found none. The major decided we would go looking for Japanese airfields to bomb. We found one near Chonghsien, which had been specified in the briefing as a target of last resort. We made another bombing run. Barton salvaged the rest of the load at an intersection of two runways, knocking down a control tower.

(Gunner Smith was keenly disappointed over this failure to get all the bombs on the target, the delayed dispatch from the Superfortress base said. He had chalked one of them, "This is for my two sons, Smitty and Jerry."—George D. Jr., one and a half years old, and Gerald Lee, a month and a half, who are with their mother at Baton Rouge, La. He had marked another, "Try this one for size, Nippo.")

That was at 1:56 p. m. There was a burst or two of ineffectual flak and three fighters appeared far below to the rear. The tail gunner whammed away at them. They gave up and we returned to our homeward course.

SPARTA'S Presbyterian Church Celebrates Its 100th Birthday

By LORRAINE NELSON, Constitution Staff Writer
SPARTA, Ga., July 30.—Kindly, mild-mannered Hood Carrington, Negro sexton, pulled gently on the bell ropes of the Presbyterian church here today in tune with a throng of young voices singing "Happy Birthday to You."

As the tones were silenced, townspeople, irrespective of denomination, began gathering on the church lawn to join in an anniversary service—the Presbyterian church's 100th. In memory of 500 played host to fellow church people of the town at a dinner on the ground.

Among the visiting group were former Spartans, once members of the church, who now live in other parts of Hancock county and Georgia. For this also was homecoming day.

Mrs. L. Baker Sr., oldest member of the congregation, received special honor. During the ceremony the 85-year-old member sat near the table where rested the first session clerk's record book—kept by A. S. Brown, her father.

Mrs. Baker first saw the century-old memento only two weeks ago when she returned from a three-month visit in Miami, Fla. George F. Dickens, present clerk of the session, located it recently in a stack of discarded church files and showed it to Mrs. Baker, who identified it as her father's.

Also here for the celebration was Dr. Homer McMillan, executive secretary of the Home Missions general assembly, Presbyterian church of the United States, who delivered the anniversary sermon. The Rev. I. T. Marks, church pastor, presided.

Later, the history of the church was reviewed—the struggles of its beginning, when a dozen or more Georgia pioneers, distinguished by such names as David Dickson, William Terrell, William Sayre, Joseph Bryan and Thomas Neal, worked for a Presbyterian church here for 15 years. The Georgia legislature finally voted to incorporate the church in 1843. Completion of the church's first building and its dedication on July 28, 1844, its escape from destruction during the Civil War; its final dismemberment in favor of the present building, dedicated in 1903; these are some of the other highlights in the history of this congregation.

Other bits of information about the century-old church were imparted in conversation which buzzed softly on the lawn when the groups disbursed after services to surround tables laden with heaps of cakes, chicken, potato salad and iced tea.

Presbyterians of Sparta claim for their church Sunday school the largest attendance in Hancock county. Through their system of transporting children from outlying districts into town on school buses, officials built the Sunday school membership from 5 to 128. Church officials still operate a bus and maintain a record enrollment for the Sunday school.

Other churches here suspended services to join with the Presbyterians in their centennial celebration.

Spellman Visits Pope; Says Mass for Yanks
ROME, July 30.—(P)—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, of New York, was received yesterday by Pope Pius XII for the third time since his arrival in the Eternal City.

The archbishop said mass today for troops stationed some distance from Rome and told them that soldiers "are the bulwark of our country in time of war, and please God you will be in time of peace."

Archbishop Spellman will bless the colors of the 803rd Military Police at a ceremony near the Quirinal tomorrow.

"HOME OF THE BRAVE!"—Barbara Cook, Atlanta singer, gave out with a stirring rendition of the national anthem yesterday as USO day was observed at Grant Park. Left is Capt. M. A. Greenblatt, director of the State Guard band, which presented a concert.

Happy Hobby

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(P)—Wartime hobby of one of Washington's streetcar conductors—giving servicemen free rides.

The conductor deposits $5 of his own money each week in the farebox, entitling him to give away 60 free rides, at three for a quarter.

Surprised servicemen not only smile, but generally give the conductor a handshake to boot.

USO Day Held At Grant Park

It was USO Day at Grant park. And a show a la Atlanta, which featured a concert by the State Guard band, visits to the Cyclorama and a circus performance by the elephants, Alice and Coco, jam-packed the park yesterday with soldiers, sailors, Marines, paratroopers and civilians.

The band, led by Capt. M. A. Greenblatt, played a medley of military airs, classical numbers and several popular hits.

Barbara Cook, teenage prima donna in Mrs. I. W. Curry's USO Camp Shows, added patriotism and glamour to the occasion when she ended the concert with the national anthem.

The grand climax came when the elephants, directed by Johnny Dilbeck, animal keeper of the zoo, stood on hind legs, danced on a tub, ate apples a soldier and sailor fed them, and saluted the American flag which first one, then the other, elephant carried.

The program was the first of a series planned by the USO Service Men's Center and the six agencies, YMCA, YWCA, NCCS, JWB, Traveler's Aid and the Salvation Army, that make up the United Service Organizations.

trois are active north of these rivers.

The Germans strengthened their last hill line below Florence and lashed out with repeated counterblows in an effort to repair the violence done by their defenses in Friday's thrust.

The battle for San Michele, stormed by New Zealanders, then lost, then recaptured last night, was typical of the fighting. Germans flung tanks and troops into counterattacks all yesterday afternoon.

Each time the New Zealanders put down what they call a "murder barrage," an abrupt concentration of exploding shells. Last night the enemy sent in six Tiger tanks which drove the New Zealanders from the village, but the Allied troops went back in under another of those concentrated barrages and this time they stayed.

To the southeast, above Arezzo, the British reported a number of gains and the Italian corps of liberation beat off two enemy counterattacks on the Adriatic coast.

Activity on the Fifth Army front before Pisa and along the Arno in both directions was limited to artillery duels and patrol skirmishes.

World Economic Union Is Asked for Roosevelt

Kidnap Trio Said Captured

The capture of three middle-aged Negro men who allegedly kidnaped a young white woman early yesterday near Chattahoochee, Fla., criminally assaulted her and left her for dead was disclosed last night.

The men were captured in north Florida by members of the Florida State Patrol.

Georgia State Patrol headquarters in Atlanta said the trio forced the woman's car from the road a short distance from Chattahoochee—about three miles from the Georgia line—a short time after midnight.

They assaulted her, severely beat her, shot her twice and left her for dead in a shallow grave, officers said. The woman revived as her assailants left and managed to scratch out from under the leaves and sand.

Passers-by heard her cries for help and carried her back to a hospital at Chattahoochee, where the crime first came to the attention of authorities. Hospital attaches listed her condition as critical.

The two bullets fired at her grazed the scalp, physicians said, but her face and body were considerably bruised and she was suffering severely from shock.

The woman, the bride of a few weeks, had been to visit her husband in a Florida Army camp and was en route home when the attack occurred.

The Negroes, who also were wanted for a series of auto thefts in Georgia, allegedly stole an automobile yesterday in Bainbridge, Ga., and later abandoned it in Florida. They were said to have stolen another car in Marianna, Fla., after the assault.

front of the Allied advance to 45 miles, the longest since shortly after the Allied landings, and still was going strong today.

But it was on the American end of the line that the Allied pushes were turning into an armed avalanche that not only was unchecked but was actually gaining momentum in a victory prospect still unmeasured.

ATHENS MAJOR ELATED

"We picked up about 100 prisoners around Brehal," said Maj. E. H. Downs, Athens, Ga., who was sitting on a tank in the center of the town, enjoying a canteen cup of coffee.

East of the Vire river the Americans pushed beyond Coudebecq, Virine and through Lehamel, six miles southeast of St. Lo, almost to Torigni-sur-Vire.

A message from the 21st Army group headquarters told of Gen. Montgomery's "very great satisfaction with the progress of the battle through the Allied front today."

"In addition to a continuation of the advance by United States forces," he said, "British troops today attacked in the Caumont sector with great eagerness and determination and by dusk the leading troops had made an advance of some miles to the south. Operations are proceeding according to plan."

Battlefront dispatches said British Lt. Gen. Miles C. Dempsey's new assault broke through the German forward line and battered into the secondary defenses in its first few hours and still rolled along south tonight in the fastest British advance since D-Day.

Roger Greene, Associated Press correspondent, said Dempsey's tanks and infantry, in the lightning thrust that caught the Germans with the bulk of their armor poised miles away in the Caen sector, smashed forward more than four and a half miles into Marshal Rommel's defenses below Caumont, and that a battle was being fought furiously in the densely wooded Normandy countryside. Associated Press Correspondent William Smith White said the British were advancing at the rate of a mile an hour in some sectors.

One British force had taken St. Jean-Breuc des Essartiers and pushed on beyond. Another, to the west, rolled along at an equal pace, taking Les Loges.

AERIAL BARRAGE

Preceded by a tremendous aerial barrage, the British shoved off dawn in the long-dormant Caumont sector west of Caen and forged ahead "in the face of fairly determined resistance." A field dispatch said the first assault forces met little opposition.

Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's armored columns in their southward dash of up to seven miles left behind islands of resistance, which were being steadily liquidated by the great mass of men and armor moving up behind the spearheads. The Army lifted a two-year veil of secrecy yesterday to honor the Armored Anvil on which Lt. Gen. Bradley's forces have beaten to pieces thousands of Rommel's best fighting men—and that Anvil is the fighting Second Armored "Hell on Wheels" Division.

In announcing the Second Armored's presence in France, the First Army headquarters also released for publication for the first time its combat record in this war. The American smash that broke the enemy's lines on the west was delivered by the 19th Corps, and possibly other units, it was announced officially, bringing to three the number of U. S. Army Corps identified in France.

Two tightly closed traps were formed by the push to Brehal on the sixth day of an offensive that has swept forward as much as 25 miles.

TRAPS CLOSE DOWN—One enclosed whatever remained of two or three German divisions southeast of Coutances, who were twice repulsed in attempts to break out.

The second snared a smaller force in retreat south of Coutances between the sea and the highway to Brehal.

From Brehal, where a column from Coutances met one coming from the east, the Americans were in a position to strike for the At-

NEW COMMANDER—Maj. Gen. Fred L. Walker, former commander of the 36th Division in Italy, who has probably seen as much front-line action as any of America's general officers, has assumed his new duties as commandant of the Infantry School at Fort Benning. The general was a student and later an instructor in the school in the early 1920s.

New Benning Commandant, Battle Vet, at Fall of Rome

By PAUL WARWICK, Constitution Staff Writer

FORT BENNING, Ga., July 31.

Maj. Gen. Fred Livingston Walker, new commandant of the Infantry School here, brings a solid background of battle action on many fronts to his new assignment on the 200,000-acre campus of this doughboy university.

Gen. Walker has assumed the command to succeed Maj. Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel, recently transferred to take up duties as commanding general of the Western Defense Command, with headquarters on the Pacific coast.

Commander of the 36th Division in Italy, Gen. Walker won the Distinguished Service Medal for the skilled and valiant manner in which he directed the landing of his segment of the Fifth Army on the beaches of Salerno; he was in the fighting at Altavilla; on the scene at the historic crossing of the Rapido; at Cassino, and in on the capture of Rome.

He won also the Distinguished Service Cross in the Third World War as a major with the Third division on the Marne and earned the Purple Heart Medal—later enhanced by an Oak Leaf Cluster—for wounds received in the first war in July of 1918.

Gen. Walker, who was a graduate of Ohio State University in the class of 1911, was appointed second lieutenant in the Army that same year, at the age of 24, became a member of the 13th Infantry and shipped with them in 1911 to the Philippines.

His temporary rank was lieutenant colonel at the end of World War I, in which he saw action in the Aisne-Marne and Champagne-Marne defenses and in the Aisne-

Distilleries' Holiday To Mean Year's Supply of Whisky, Gin

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(P)—The distillers' month-long holiday from war production, starting Tuesday, will bring to the consuming public about one normal year's supply of whisky and gin, liquor industry sources estimated today.

Some distillers believe that the release, after 22 months of making only war alcohol, will tide them over until Germany's collapse, when war demands will drop, or until a possible second holiday can be arranged in 1945.

The reconversion—first to be granted on an industry-wide basis, even for a limited period—is expected to provide 40,000,000 gallons of high-proof alcohol, most of which will be blended with aged spirits now in warehouses to make whisky.

This volume is well above a normal peacetime monthly output. It is made possible by the war expansion of distilleries and continuous operation on the 24-hour basis which has been in effect to meet military requirements.

Rye whisky fanciers will be well taken care of, one distillery official predicted, and domestic gin will be produced in quantities sufficient to put that nearly unobtainable liquor back onto store shelves.

Since the use of corn is forbidden, no straight bourbon whisky will be made. Some southern distillers of bourbon, unfamiliar with the production of rye whisky, plan to produce only grain neutral spirits which can be blended into gin. Perhaps 30 per cent of the total distillation will be so used.

A freer supply of liquor already has resulted from the War Production Board's announcement of the August release. Retailers in some cities are advertising whisky sales with case lots. Trade quarters attribute this in part to a desire of distilleries to dispose of whiskies blended with cane and fruit spirits before the arrival of preferred blends which will contain only rye or wheat spirits.

Some of the well advertised whisky blends, which have been almost displaced by unfamiliar wartime brands, will reappear to some extent, mainly to keep the brand names before the public. However, industry men said that these would not be released in the volume "that either producers or consumers would like."

The Berlin radio asserted the Allies for the last two days had been using the harbor of Cherbourg for the disembarkation of troops.

Tobacco Marts To Open Today

Georgia and Florida flue-cured tobacco growers and warehousemen, beaten in their week-long battle for a 2-cent increase in announced ceiling prices, pitched in yesterday to make today's delayed market openings as successful as possible.

Reports of bulging warehouses came from throughout the growing belt, while here in Atlanta State Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder spoke in highest praise of those who made the fight.

Just back from Washington, where the Office of Price Administration turned down requests that the ceilings on ungraded and untied tobacco be increased from 39 to 41 cents per pound, and on graded and tied from 43 1/2 to 45 1/2, Linder said he had never seen a case better presented.

"In my many trips to Washington, it was the first time that I have seen all the people—governors, senators, congressmen, growers—of the five flue-cured growing states in complete union.

"Also, never did I see as cold-blooded a decision as the one reached by the OPA, a decision which the government officials could not attempt to justify.

"And to the growers I have this to say—they have no choice except to sell their tobacco, unless they are prepared to keep it, and if they like this kind of treatment in Washington to go out in November and vote to keep it four more years."

Linder said that all those who fought for the higher ceiling were united in saying that this action of OPA was repudiation of the Chicago platform pledge of the Democratic party to put the farmer on an equal with the industrial worker.

"The industrial worker today is getting an average hourly wage of one and three-tenths dollars per hour. Under this ceiling the farmer cannot possibly earn more than 25 to 30 cents an hour. He will receive less per hour for his

He Watched the War Go By How To Be 'AWOL' Win Promotion

WITH THE AEF IN ITALY, July 23.—(Delayed)—(P)—Add to the list of guys who take their orders literally the name of Sgt. James Wright, Raywick, Ky., who for three weeks, day and night, stayed in an Italian barn all alone and guarded 600 cases of Army rations.

Then a private first class in the 85th Division, he was placed there on guard at the start of the big drive. Days went by, the sound of battle grew more distant and finally faded out altogether; still no relief arrived. The weeks went by and James had to keep reminding himself of that rule "to quit my post only when properly relieved." Someone said the front was 100 miles away and he began to waver. Then the rear of the rear echelon outfit began to go by. That was too much. He hailed a passing vehicle, sent a note to his commanding officer.

The note brought back an investigating officer, for James had long since been listed as AWOL. The investigation resulted in a recommendation for devotion to duty and a commission to the rank of sergeant.

1944 labor than for his 1943 labor.

Decision to open markets was reached after a long conference involving senators, representatives, governors, commissioners of agriculture, growers and warehousemen and members of government agencies.

The tobacco delegation, representing Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina and Virginia, told Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson that the requested increase could be absorbed by retailers of cigarettes without raising prices to consumers.

Vinson ruled, however, that the question was properly one for OPA to decide, and was outside his jurisdiction.

The group then met with James F. Brownlee, deputy OPA administrator, and Jean Carroll, head of the OPA food price section. Both men concurred later in a statement to the effect that they had not received "any facts or figures" to prove that the announced ceilings—39 cents on loose, ungraded tobacco and 43 1/2 cents on tied and graded leaf—were "profitable to the producers."

Linder said the OPA officials failed to take into consideration the increase in the cost of labor, which he said figures high in tobacco production.

"The cost of farm labor has increased 20 per cent since last year," he said. "The cost of producing, housing and curing a crop of tobacco represents more than 50 per cent labor costs. Therefore, the cost of the 1944 crop would be increased 10 per cent on account of labor prices alone, not considering other factors."

There are 22 Georgia markets ready to open today and two in Florida. The Virginia and Carolina markets open later.

More Vital Than Ever

The use, by the Germans, of the robot bombs against Britain has emphasized, more than ever before, the necessity for the utmost rigidity in control of German industry, after the war is over. It will be necessary, now more than ever, for the Allied Powers to maintain troops of occupation so numerous that careful guard may be kept over every square mile of postwar Germany. If we relax this guard at all, it is morally certain the Germans will immediately attempt to create either greater robot planes or some other instrument of destruction for use against any allied land within their range.

And, in a few years, it is practically certain robots will be developed capable of finding targets in America from their European starting points.

We know from the history of the two decades between the two world wars that, given even an excuse of opportunity, the conquest-crazy Germans will try, again, to arm themselves for attack. And, with new weapons now in use or developing, it will be much easier to do such arming in secret than it was before.

Whatever else the robot weapon has done it has shown the Allies that no leniency can be granted defeated Germany for many years to come. Even if all of our own people do not realize this, be sure everyone in England knows and that everyone in Russia is likewise keenly aware of the future threat.

The Woodruff Foundation

On last Saturday the will of the late Ernest Woodruff, for more than half a century a prominent figure in Atlanta, was probated in Decatur, Ga., revealing that the great bulk of the estate was left to charity through the medium of the Emily and Ernest Woodruff Foundation. The will left to the foundation several millions of dollars. During his lifetime Mr. Woodruff had made substantial gifts to the foundation and his wife also had, in her will, left it the bulk of her estate.

The foundation's charter directs that its revenues shall be spent for the benefit of health, education and religion. Through the past several years the foundation generously has aided all three of these fields of activity.

It becomes increasingly apparent that this foundation will become of increasing benefit to Atlanta and Georgia. It is very probable others of wealth will leave it substantial amounts in the years ahead. Its directors have important plans and a very real vision of what may be accomplished for the benefit of the city and state and the entire southeastern region. This plan will be revealed as soon as the war ends and actual construction and planning are possible. Thus will the foundation mean, in good deeds for mankind, a very tangible immortality for the two persons whose money it holds for use in behalf of this and generations to come.

"Heroes' Phone Calls"

The Atlanta Constitution has joined in initiating the campaign to collect money to enable wounded and sick service men brought to Army hospitals in the Atlanta area to make a telephone call to their loved ones. To this campaign The Constitution made an initial gift of $250.

Soldiers and sailors brought from battlefields in Normandy, Italy and other fronts of the war to hospitals in and near Atlanta, usually arrive by plane or train. Their first opportunity to get in touch with the people at home is on their arrival at the hospital of their destination. Picked up on battlefields, rushed from the scene of injury, they often are without money.

Many persons have wished they could do something of a personal nature for one or more soldiers. The newspapers of Atlanta will collect donations and will in turn ask the Red Cross to allocate the money so that every wounded or sick soldier arriving at a hospital here may make a telephone call home to his mother or wife or sweetheart. It is not a donation to the Red Cross. They simply assist. This is your donation to a soldier.

"Buy a telephone call home for a wounded soldier." Make your checks payable to "Heroes' Phone Calls" and mail them to The Constitution.

Help some boy who has done a lot for you to telephone his mother.

Valuable Knowledge

The "GI Bill of Rights," the law enacted by congress to provide benefits and financial aid to honorably discharged veterans of this war, is practically universally acclaimed as a fair and proper recognition of the debt owed these veterans by the nation.

However, no matter how generous the benefits available, they are of no use unless the veteran eligible knows it. It is essential, not only that all veterans are fully informed on the aid waiting for him on his return to civilian life, but also that all officers and officials who have contact with him know full details likewise.

Hence the importance of the series of "schools," which is to be conducted, one in each Georgia congressional district, under sponsorship of the American Legion and the Georgia Department of Labor. These schools will train volunteer workers on how to help returning service men and women to obtain the benefits due them under the bill.

It is sincerely to be hoped that not one veteran be overlooked in any detail of the assistance which is his for the proper asking.

Cattleman's Dilemma

Editor, Constitution: Attached is a clipping from The Constitution of today having reference to the birth of twin calves at Sandersville.

I do not think this is such a rarity. Mr. T. K. Glenn, in the last several years, has twice proudly announced the birth of twin calves at his farm and, this week twin Hereford calves were born at my farm—a boy and a girl. The little ones and their mother are doing well. The only difficulty in sight is that the mother is not big "bustle" enough to supply sufficient milk for both. If you have any suggestion which would help me out of this dilemma I shall appreciate your advice.

HUGHES SPALDING.

(Editor's note—The Constitution's farm experts, after lengthy caucus seeking to solve Farmer Spalding's dilemma, suggest only the possibility of a bovine wet nurse or that he sneak out some of the nursing bottles from the nursery of his nieces and nephews, and bottle feed the slighted twin.)

Encyclopedia

Editor, Constitution: Mr. Vester M. Owensby in his letter to you of the 24th made some astounding statements. I can only suggest to him that he read in the Encyclopedia Britannica, the history of the Prohibition party.

He will find that the fanatic named Volstead, as he terms him, was a congressman and was the author of the enforcement bill; that the Prohibition party had had a steady growth of 80 years prior to the Eighteenth amendment. He will also find that the old maids, whom he credits as being instrumental in the passage of the bill, could not vote at that time. Owensby will learn to his surprise that 33 states already had state-wide prohibition before the amendment was submitted to the electorate. Many of them had been dry long before World War I.

If the Encyclopedia Britannica is in error, Mr. Owensby should correct them before the next edition is published.

'Sets the Purposes'

Editor, Constitution: Your article on the editorial page under the title "The Minute He Hit 'Dag' He Knew" should be distributed everywhere, especially to our men and women in the armed forces overseas. It sets the purpose for which our men, indeed all of us, are struggling forth in such elemental and yet appealing terms that no one could possibly fail to understand, and be inspired to more sincere effort to preserve "our country."

So often writers and speakers say the things which need to be said about what we are fighting for in terms having an air of remoteness about them. This you have avoided in an unusually effective manner.

It is not an easy thing to produce as much copy as you do each day and keep it of such high quality as marks your productions.

Editor, Constitution: Being for Roosevelt, naturally, I feel very antagonistic toward the politicians who oppose every "square deal" bill that goes before the congress of the United States, therefore, I look great pleasure in reading the story of Senator Cotton Ed Smith, and I think a lot of people shared this pleasure with me, so I would like to make a suggestion to your newspaper regarding it. I think you should "play the story up" as much as possible and at the bottom you should print the following notice: Notice to Senators George and Russell: This is what happens when you oppose a square deal.

GEORGIA EDITORS SAY:

ROOSEVELT AND TRUMAN (Fitzgerald Herald)

The defeat of Henry Wallace and the acceptance of Harry Truman in his stead shows the Democrats moving slightly in a conservative direction. The President, called a pitcher in one figure of speech, a quarterback in another, remains at heart the safe bet, but he has to tack to catch the wind. Sometimes veering to the left, now a little to the right, he comes back always to the lines on his chart.

Wallace presents a strange figure. He is probably liked, admired and trusted by many more plain people than politicians who pull strings could possibly believe. But perhaps his thinking is as far ahead of the times as Wilson's was in 1918—and that, in a world wedded to fact and business, is a disadvantage. It is too soon to say final farewell to Henry. There are other capacities in which his real values may find more useful fields than the vice presidency.

Truman is known to most Americans only through his Truman committee, whose conduct has won their respect. His acceptance speech was a model of sense and brevity. His fellow citizens hope he lives up to that first impression.

John L. Lewis For Bricker and Dewey

I am not one given to pointing a finger at shouting, "Looky yonder!" It worries me to jump up and down and also my mind is not what it was.

Nevertheless, I am also weary of hearing the welkin ring with so many denunciations of the CIO's effort to play a leading role at the Democratic convention by persons who keep such a complete silence on the activities of Mr. John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers who are working the political action committee for the Gov. Tom Dewey organization. The Republican board of strategy has been quiet about John L. Lewis, but he is busy.

During the Republican convention Mr. John O'Donnell, the leading publicist of the Republican party, frankly stated that John L. Lewis and Big Bill Hutcheson were "very much in evidence behind the scenes," and that the telephone wires from Republican headquarters to Lewis' office in Washington were "kept hot."

He went on to say that he had not been decided when Lewis personally would begin active support of Dewey. He surmised at September as a probable date.

So much for that phase of it, announced officially by the party's publicist.

MR. LEWIS' PLANS Lewis is, to my mind, probably the ablest man in organized labor but also is, without doubt, the most dangerous man. His arrogance is great, his ambition to be the dictator of American politics is supreme and dominates the man's every action.

I join with others who wish that Madame Perkins were not secretary of labor. But no one has said she is not truthful. And it is as to the reason for Lewis' interest in the Democratic party that he allowed to run as the vice president.

Now, what sort of bitter tea is John L. Lewis brewing for this country? Well, I have at hand copies of the Lewis paper, "The United Mine Workers' Journal," of July 11. The Richmond Times Dispatch has some comments of which I will reproduce a few paragraphs concerning John L. Lewis' all-out for the Bricker and Dewey campaign.

"A featured columnist for this official organ of John L. Lewis signing himself 'Uncle Bill Fact Finder,' is lyrical in his references to the Republican labor plank, and calls the above-mentioned attack on wage freezing 'an exact endorsement of the United Mine Workers' stand against the 'Little Steel' formula for holding down wages' (italics ours). That formula, he recalled, is about all that has stood between the country and unlimited wage boosts, the surest road to uncontrolled inflation. And this assault on 'wage freezing' comes from the GOP, the self-styled party of 'sound money,' 'conservative business principles,' and so on!"

"K. C. Adams, another staff writer for the United Mine Workers' Journal, takes a similar line, and attempts to show that Dewey and Bricker are the true friends of labor. Some of the reasoning here is as colorful as one could imagine. For example, Mine Worker Adams says the Democrats 'will lie and lie and lie about the labor records of Dewey and Bricker,' and they will attack Bricker because 'he said that men had no right to strike in wartime.' But, says Mine Worker Adams (whose union shut down the vital coal mines four times in a single war year) 'the policy committee of the U. M. W. A. and the membership of the U. M. W. A. are against strikes in wartime,' and they demonstrated it over and over again."

THE COMMIES That is a nice dish of tripe, but it indicates the mind of John L. Lewis and is his opening gun. No one has a record of more strenuous and consistent opposition to everything Communistic than I, but as for the charges of Communism in the Hillman ranks, it is a well-known fact the most Communists are in the catch-all unions of John L. Lewis' outfit. There are a few Communists in a half-dozen labor unions, but all of them, without exception, went into the CIO with John L. Lewis when he formed that organization. The CIO had a difficult time getting rid of them and has not entirely succeeded. They are the fleas that came in on John L. and they are still his fleas.

And another thing. Gov. Tom Dewey is the product of a machine in New York. That is a simple fact, largely overlooked. Harry Truman is no more a machine man than is Dewey or Hoover. The "Oh, gang" in a copy of a letter Doreen wrote to the American Red Cross headquarters in London.

You will be as interested in reading that letter as I was. If you have a boy in the bomber command based in England you will be more interested. And I thought, having read Doreen's letter, you might care to write to her yourself, if you are mother, sister or sweetheart of one of the boys who may see her signals, and tell her you understand and feel better for knowing that such a message goes to your boy, even if only by proxy, from you. Here is the letter:

TYPICAL HOME "I have often wondered whether it would be a comfort to the mothers and wives of American airmen to know of the anxious thought and affectionate regard which follows their boys from many an English home as they fly on their dangerous journeys."

"Hundreds of people whom the men themselves will never know follow their flights with the keenest interest and anxiety for their welfare."

"To their relations, so far away, it may seem that their boys get off from—what to them I suppose is a foreign land, with no one to take any special note of their passing, to wish them 'God-speed and a safe return, but that is exactly what hundreds of us do. 'My own home is typical. Since the war I have lived in this quiet corner of England with an invalid father. We are quite unknown to American airmen, and yet from our home goes constant thought for their safety."

"From the back of our house the view is of a wide expanse of sky merging into the sea, and across that sky your boys fly daily. Even as I write I am watching them."

"At the sound of the heavy drone of their planes approaching we call to each other 'Here come the boys.' I dash into the kitchen and seize a duster, tea-cloth, something white and large with which, running into the garden, I wave vigorously as they pass overhead. Perhaps the boys never see this friendly signal, but I hope that occasionally one does and says to his fellows, 'Look, there is somebody wishing us luck.'"

THINKS OF MOTHERS "As I watch them go I think of their mothers and that perhaps they would like to be able to do what I am doing, so I wave more vigorously on their behalf and call 'God bless you, boys. A safe return.'"

"I also gaze upon them with considerable elation, remembering the days when the cry was 'Here come the Huns,' and diving among the garden produce hoping to be mistaken for a caterpillar or some other garden grub."

"If they are low enough we always count them and then when later we hear them coming in from the sea, we go out and, rather apprehensively this time, count them again. The numbers don't always agree, so we stoutly hope we counted wrongly on going out; after all it is not easy to be sure, and anyway they don't always fly home as tidily as they fly out. Great is the pleasure when more come in, and if any lame duck comes struggling along in 1918—and that, in a world wedded to fact and business, is a disadvantage. It is too soon to say final farewell to Henry. There are other capacities in which his real values may find more useful fields than the vice presidency."

Truman is known to most Americans only through his Truman committee, whose conduct has won their respect. His acceptance speech was a model of sense and brevity. His fellow citizens hope he lives up to that first impression.

"Sincerely yours, 'DOREEN OWEN.'"

Union Issue

NEW YORK, July 30.—Up to date in this campaign for the presidency, neither candidate has expressed any intention to work for legal reforms which would free the American worker from the oppression of the union movement. It has been a long time since Tom Dewey signified that he was even aware of the unions' menace to individual human freedom and, thus, to the collective freedom of us all, within our own country. It may be taken for granted that Mr. Roosevelt will not even mention the subject, for he has successfully ignored it for years and has actively thwarted several attempts by congress to establish legal standards and restraints with which the unions would have had to comply for the protection of the whole people.

Mr. Dewey operates under a handicap, because the Roosevelt propaganda has created a thoughtless belief, or superstition, among millions of voters that he is pro labor, whereas, in fact, he is free labor's worst enemy. Therefore, Dewey or anyone else who would impose on unions fair obligations to the whole community would be falsely depicted as a man hostile to labor.

That, however, is Dewey's hard luck. It sets for him a test of debate and statesmanship in the campaign which, however, for expediency and votes, he may decide to ignore with a mental reservation that, if elected, he would take it up later in recommendations to congress.

Out of Control

Whatever candidates may say, the fact remains that the unions are out of control of their members and immune to legal restraints. They are a powerful anti-labor movement with absolutely no obligation to hold free elections of their officers, or any elections at all, to account for their funds, to limit the salaries and graft of their officials, to admit qualified workers to membership, to limit their activities to collective bargaining or to exclude criminals and alien Communists from official position in their councils.

With the active help of President Roosevelt they have, in thousands of cases, violated the stated purpose of the Wagner act, which is to permit workers to bargain through agents of their own free choice. They have, on the contrary forced unwilling workers to accept representation by henchmen of President's own political machine in contempt of the very law which they hailed as labor's Magna Charta.

By this process, workers by millions have been forced to contribute to the Roosevelt campaign funds through elections taken up by his own political agents under compulsion and threat. This method is almost identical with that of Benito Mussolini in Italy, and it may be that the workers are too stupid and too emotional in their politics to care even though this is demonstrated to be so. Mussolini won the Italian workers with the same bait that Roosevelt has used in chumming up the suckers of American labor, and up to this time the American worker has not shown himself to be any more intelligent or careful of his liberties than his Italian brother who sold out for a little more cheap, paper money with correspondingly less buying power and the promise of an old-age pension which is now still pie in the sky.

Right of Robbery

Roosevelt's supreme card has recognized or, to use a more fitting word, has established, for union bosses the right to commit highway robbery in the guise of soliciting employment for their subjects. Highway robbery is a crime which calls for a low, criminal character and it was shown in the supreme court case that most of the defendant union men were not workers or chosen labor agents but common, underworld jailbirds. This right to commit highway robbery legally is not a myth or a distortion but a legal fact, and so was described by one of the justices in whom a spark of civic decency survived, in a dissenting opinion.

If a union boss will rob an employer on the highway he will have no scruple to rob his own subjects in the union through shakedowns or theft of their money from the treasury. Yet, Roosevelt prevented the adoption of a law to forbid highway robbery in the name of unionism, and resisted all efforts to elevate the character of union administration so that the worker, who constitutes American labor, may expect humane treatment in his union.

Just how far gone is the American worker in his cynicism, political emotion, prejudice, docility and ignorance of his actual condition one can only estimate. At times he seems to be hopelessly persuaded to Fascism because it doesn't hurt much, yet, Roosevelt won't try to arouse him, for it was he who put the spell on him. Dewey might try, but if so he would run the risk of losing the faceless American vote and all chance to save him from his own greedy, selfish, immediate delight in war wages and the right to tell the boss he never the union agent, to go to hell.

A Lasting Peace, A Permanent Crease . . .

It's amazing what you can do with cloth.

Not, I mean, like wrapping it around Dorothy Lamour for that woo-woo effect.

Science, I mean. It's amazing what science can do. Or have you already seen the announcement that researchers of the Montsanto Chemical Company have succeeded in inventing a chemical which will keep pants permanently pressed and blue-serge shine-proof?

It will just be a question of time, at the rate they're going, before some genius comes up with whistle-less corduroy and non-scratchable red flannel.

Of course it'll be pretty hard on the nation's pressing clubs, once that eternal-crease material gets into general use. But then most of them already have enough work in their plants to keep them busy for the next twenty years or so.

I guess, too, it's a good thing the double-ring ceremony is coming back into favor. A few more developments like shine-proof serge and you will hardly be able to tell married and single men apart.

The same scientists, incidentally, have also discovered a process to keep nylon stockings from running.

All of which presents a very puzzling problem:

What, when peace comes and servants are plentiful and stockings run-proof, will women find to talk about?

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

Effect of War's End On National Election

WASHINGTON, July 30.—What effect, if any, an early collapse of Germany would have on the coming presidential election is a question that is now engaging the minds of political leaders in both major parties.

The swift-moving tide of events in Europe during recent weeks has caused the question to come to the fore more than ever. For despite the warnings just made by Secretary of War Stimson that the Nazis are yet far from beaten, there is a general feeling in Allied world capitals that Germany's end is not far off.

Some of our highest ranking military leaders are known to be of the same opinion. The Russians are boldly proclaiming that the Nazis are beaten. It is just a matter of how long it will take us to finish the job.

That may come through a sudden-collapse within the next few months, or it may conceivably be delayed until 1945. As one of our leading military figures has put it, much depends on the stamina of the German people—their ability to take further punishment. Under the circumstances, the question of the possible effect an early ending of the European war would have on the election becomes more real than academic.

AID REPUBLICANS? Based on the results shown in some of the public sentiment polls, the Republicans feel that their chances at victory would be tremendously improved by a cessation of hostilities. Hence we find such GOP leaders as Sen. Vandenberg, of Michigan, vociferously urging congress to get busy with postwar plans in preparation for the sudden end which he presumes to see in high probability.

The strategy behind that is to sell the country the idea that the war in Europe will be over shortly before or immediately after the November election, and therefore the slogan about changing horses in the middle of the stream will not apply.

Most observers agree that had the war ended on both fronts some months back, it is likely that the beginning of the year, the argument for the fourth term would have been considerably weakened. Some doubt that President Roosevelt would even have been a candidate to succeed himself.

The way would have been opened for him to retire, perhaps under an agreement from both parties whereby he would have been a central figure in the peace negotiations. Republicans would have been only too glad to make such a concession as a means of removing him as a candidate this fall.

DEMOCRAT VIEW But while the Republicans feel that their chances would be improved by an early collapse of Germany, seasoned Democratic heads take an opposite view. At least they believe that the election situation would not be affected enough to change the outcome.

In the first place, it is pointed out in support of the Democratic argument that whatever may happen in Europe the war in the Pacific will in all likelihood continue for some time in the future. At the present moment no one expects that the Japs would fold up immediately after we knocked Germany out of the war. The conflict is yet to be brought home to them in a way that it has to the Nazis. The Japanese warlords may realize that they are done for, but they are not the type of people to quit before a finished fight.

Consequently, if the war in Europe should end before November, as easily it may, President Roosevelt would simply shift the emphasis from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and there would be the same continuity in our war plans.

HALF-DONE JOB It might even help his chances at re-election to have things work out this way. Because he would be able to go before the people with the claim that the job was only half done. Also immense prestige would go to him as the commander in chief who successfully led the nation through the greatest war of all time, fought and won in a minimum amount of time and at a minimum cost of lives.

There is still another potent force in the President's favor, however, which will apply regardless of the state of the war at the time of the elections. It concerns the important peace negotiations which will follow the end of the conflict.

Having been forced into two costly world wars within a generation, the vast majority of the American people are determined that we not repeat the error of the last war, wherein we refused to join with the other enlightened nations of the world in setting up the necessary machinery to preserve world peace.

ONLY ONE ANSWER As a disciple of President Wilson and the one man who warned us against the present conflict, who is better qualified to represent America at the peace table during these negotiations than Mr. Roosevelt? That is the question the Democrats will be prepared to put to the country in the event of a German collapse before November.

Who should it be—Roosevelt or Dewey?

There is only one answer, of course. And in the answer which the country gives Democrats profess to have every confidence in the President's re-election. Time and war events have simply stacked the cards against Governor Dewey.

Art of Sitting Worthy of Praise

Habersham road can keep its mansions. Piedmont may have the park. The people who have them are welcome to station wagons and swimming pools. This neighborhood, this simple, untentious, close-to-town neighborhood, has an attraction that must be hard to find nowadays even in Utopia.

She's a black-eyed, bobby-soxer beauty named Patsy—and, oh, wondrous thought, Patsy is a sister!

Sitting for the benefit of the childless and therefore uninitiated, is an ancient and honorable art entirely unrelated to either an Indian chief whose other name was Bull or to those showoffs who used to practice it atop flag poles.

Sitting, as practiced by Patsy, is one of the nobler callings, an exalted and even lucrative profession designed to:

1. Let harassed parents out of the house at night.
2. Pile up for the sitting sisterhood a fund for charm bracelet bangles, Sinatra records or whatever it is their young hearts hanker after this season.

Time was, before Patsy, when tucking the little angel in bed at night was to nearly every mother in the block an equivalent of shipwrecking herself on a desert island and breaking up her life raft for firewood. There she was, marooned. There also was papa, marooned—unless he was a cad and suddenly remembered a business engagement.

The dimensions of your island were the dimensions of your house—and you dared to travel no farther than you could hear a baby's sneeze, approximately as far as the front porch on the north and the clothesline on the south.

The night might be sweet and moonbright and you might remember 'way back when you asked nothing more exciting than to wander out for an hour's walk with your spouse, sniffing the fragrance of freshly watered earth and grass, pausing to chat at a neighbor's front steps or, in passing, to peer unabashed into the lighted windows of the folks down the street. But that was years ago. The baby might wake up!

Movies? Up and down the block mothers wailed: "Haven't seen a picture since 'Birth of a Nation'." Bridge? "Well," hesitatingly, "can you come to our house? We can get out!" Dancing? "Gracious, what a funny question. We're forgetting how!"

Those couples you knew who lived with their in-laws or had a maiden aunt in the house were supremely lucky. At least they could drop down in the corner drug store and glance at the new magazines or run up to the corner to mail a letter. Not you—not after you wiped the last smear of pabulum off the baby's chin and tucked him in for the night. He was in—and so were you.

GALLUP POLL

Voters' Shift Falls Heaviest on Demos

By GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 30.—National Democratic Chairman Robert E. Hannegan's urgent plea at Chicago that Democrats bend every effort to turn out the largest possible vote this November as the best means of helping the Roosevelt cause is based upon a sound appraisal of the situation facing the Democratic party.

Victory for President Roosevelt this November will actually depend in large part upon the ability of the party to get workers who have left their home states or areas to register and vote this fall.

The reason that the Democrats will want to get these people into the voting booths come November is very simple. Three out of every five prefer Roosevelt to Dewey to day, according to Institute polls.

This is shown in the following table giving the Dewey-Roosevelt preference today of people who say they have not voted before in the election district where they now live—a group which includes those who have never bothered to vote and those too young to vote heretofore, as well as those who

Those Who Haven't Voted in Their Districts

Favor Roosevelt 59%

Favor Dewey 41%

In other words, among those who have not voted in the districts where they now live, for every 100 who stay away from the polls in November, the Democrats stand to lose 59 votes to only 41 for the Republicans.

What is even more important, without the above group a Dewey victory would be assured today, as the following table indicates:

Those Who Have Voted Before in Districts Where They Live

Favor Roosevelt 48%

Favor Dewey 52%

The extent of the job facing the Democrats is emphasized by the fact that Institute figures brought up to date show well above 10,000,000 potential voters who have not voted in any election in the districts where they now reside.

Proposed City Salary Raises Appraised

Further blanket salary increases to city employees will be finally adopted or rejected at the August 7 meeting of city council. It is proposed that a 5 per cent increase be given those making up to $250 per month, and 2 1/2 per cent to those over $250.

Last January a plan was adopted placing city employees on an automatic sliding scale of salary increases. The league supported this plan in the belief that loyal, efficient employees should be given raises as a matter of justice in recognition of their services. Council granted, also, blanket increases in addition to these earned increments.

The present proposals bring up questions of far-reaching consequences relative to the financial status of the city.

1. Is it morally sound for city employees to receive three wage increases in one year when employees in private business must conform to wage stabilization rules?

2. Are city employees to be relieved of making war sacrifices by getting increases equal to rising living costs and higher income taxes? Wouldn't such action favor them at the expense of the taxpayer?

3. Since money for the raises would be taken from salary account accumulations created by war-time vacancies and restricted services, is it proposed that these vacancies and reduced services be permanent. If the jobs are to be filled and services restored to their prewar level, how will the bill be met?

4. If all the money in the present salary accounts is divided out among various workers, within a factory is probably greater than in America.

"Is this not an abandonment of the Marx principle of Share and share alike?" we asked. "Will not the next step be more economic freedom?"

"Not at all," they replied. "That doctrine is just a goal which might be achieved in a thousand years, but we can only reach that goal by owning all means of production."

LAND FOR FAMILY

There is another often cited trend toward capitalism. Families are allowed to use approximately one-fifth of an acre on which they may grow a portion of their own food. But the land does not belong to the family, and a percentage of the crop must be paid to the state as rental for land and tools.

This land must be tilled after regular work. As the average man or woman labors 11 hours a day, six days a week, and donates every other Sunday to the Red army, the cultivation of this small strip of land is a means of securing additional work additional production and additional revenue for the state. It is another method of increased productive incentive for the worker.

Lastly, there has been established the so-called free market, or rynik. This is an open market place where people may sell surplus pieces of clothing or bits of food at highly inflated prices. Speculation at the rynik is strictly forbidden, however. An item may be purchased only for one's own use and not for resale. Heavy penalties are exacted against those who violate this principle. Even in this simplest of market places, therefore, there are no merchants.

NAZIS FAIL

When the Germans occupied a portion of the Soviet Union, they re-established private ownership of land and tools, production and distribution. Some 11 merchants appeared in every village. Peasants were encouraged to own land. When the Russians regained these lost regions they immediately abolished all free enterprise. It was frequently told that the people themselves, in these liberated areas, voluntarily gave up any private ownership. The reversion to the Soviet system of total collectivism was swift and complete.

The older, top-ranking Communist leaders instilled this system of collectivism 27 years ago. They believe it saved Russia from German enslavement. These older leaders are not going to change the system, the directors of factories and farms are men in their 30's. They know no other system for comparison. Any "Doubting Thomases" have disappeared or have been convinced by the successes of war.

Today not even telescopic or X-ray vision could see any private enterprise clothing in the Russian Bear's wardrobe.

Fill me with the fullness of Thy grace, O God. Show me what is excellent and enable me to attain it, for Thy name's sake.

Call to Rescue Some Big, Crippled Tanks

SOMEWHERE IN NORMANDY—(By Wireless)—It was just beginning dusk when the order came. A soldier came running up the pasture and said there was a call for our ordnance evacuation company to pull out some crippled tanks. We had been sitting on the grass and we jumped up and ran down the slope. Waiting at the gate stood an M-19 truck and behind it a big wrecker with a crane.

The day had been warm, but dusk was bringing a chill, as always. One of the soldiers loaned me his mackinaw.

Soldiers stood atop their big machine with a stance of impatience, like firemen waiting to start. We pulled out through the hedgerow gate onto the main macadam highway. It was about 10 miles to the frontlines.

"We should make it before full darkness," one of the officers said. We went through shattered Carentan and on beyond for miles. Then we turned off at an angle in the road. "This is Purple Heart corner," the officer said.

Beyond there the roadside soldiers thinned out. Traffic ceased altogether. With an increasing tempo the big guns crashed around us. Hedges began to make weird shadows. You peered closely at sentries in every open hedge-gate just out of nervous alertness.

The smell of death washed past us in a heavy drizzle of rain. There is nothing worse in war than the foul odor of death. There is no last vestige of dignity in it.

A DIM FARMHOUSE

We turned up a gravel lane and drove slowly. The dusk was deepening. A gray stone farmhouse sat dimly off the road. A little yard and driveway semicircled in front of it. Against the front of the house stood five German soldiers, facing inward, their hands above their heads. An American infantryman stood in the driveway with a Tommy-gun pointed at them. We drove on for about 50 yards and stopped. The drivers shut off their Diesel motors.

One officer went into an orchard to try to find where the tanks were. In wartime nobody ever knows where anything is. The rest of us waited along the road beside an old stone barn. Three jeeps were parked beside it. The dusk was deeper now.

Out of the orchards around us roared and thundered our own artillery. An officer lit a cigaret. A sergeant with a rifle slung on his shoulder walked up and said, "You better put that out, sir. There's snipers all around and they'll shoot at a cigaret."

The officer crushed the cigaret in his fingers, not waiting to drop it to the ground, and said, "Thanks."

"It's for your own good," the sergeant said, apologetically. The only traffic past us was an occasional Jeep rigged up with a steel framework above to carry two stretcher cases. Every few minutes a jeep would pass with its patient burdens, slowly and silently and almost as though it was feeling its way.

Somehow as darkness comes down in a land of great danger you want things hushed. People begin to talk in low voices and feet on jeep throttles tread less heavily.

GERMAN PLANE

An early German plane droned overhead, passed, turned, dived—and his white tracers came slanting down out of the sky. We crouched behind a stone wall. He was half a mile away, but the night is big and bullets can go anywhere and you are nervous.

An armored car pulled around us, pulled a ditch ahead and shut off its motor. They said there was in case the German night patrols tried to filter through.

On ahead there were single rifle shots and the give and take of machine-gun rattles—one fast and one slow, one German and one American. You wondered after each blast if somebody who was whole a moment ago, some other stranger, was now lying in sudden death, or anguish or dread in the illimitable darkness.

A shell whined that old familiar wail and hit in the orchard ahead with a crash. I moved quickly around behind the barn.

"I don't like that," inquired a soldier out of the dusk. I said, "No, do you?" And he replied as honestly, "I sure as hell don't."

A sergeant came up the road and said, "You can stay here if you want to, but they shell this barn every hour on the hour. They're zeroed in on it."

NEAR MIDNIGHT

We looked at our watches. It was five minutes till midnight. Some of our soldiers stood boldly out in the middle of the road talking. But you could sense some of us, who were less composed,

"Hitler will be assassinated or will commit suicide within three months."—Statement of radio news commentator.

It's easier to prophesy some event far away Than to call to mind the food we had for dinner yesterday . . . By the tea-leaves in the tea-cup or the wish-bone of the goose. We can make our loose predictions . . . and I do mean Missus Luce! So it's fortunate our prophecies are seldom ever checked.

Or we'd lose the prophet's mantle and our future would be wrecked. We have dopedsters for the horses, fortune-telling magazines. And the card tricks people teach us with the aces, jacks and queens. And the thing that makes us wonder is, if people know so much, Why is it they've never learned the draftee foolishness of such. But in this complex squirrel-cage, where all of us are caught, There's little wonder that the wish is "parent to the thought!"

We're on a weary journey and the road is pretty rough. And we feel it will get smoother if we wish it hard enough. We should not wish hard luck for folks as they go passing through—The troubles knocking at our door will call upon them, too. The paper-hanger of the Rhine is riding for a fall. He's about to get some pasting like he pasted on the wall—We hope he will not pass away, we think that would be sad—We wish him many years of health and hope it all is bad.

being close to the stone wall, even close to the motherhood of the big silent trucks. Then an officer came out of the orchard. He had the directions. We all gathered around and listened. We had to back up, cross two pastures, turn down another lane and go forward from there.

We were to drag back two German tanks for fear the Germans might relieve them during the night. We backed ponderously up the road, our powerful exhaust blowing up dust as we moved. As we passed the gray stone farmhouse we could see five silhouettes, very faintly through the now almost complete night—five Germans still facing the gray farmhouse.

We came to a lane, and pulled forward into the orchard very slowly, for you could barely see now. Even in the lightning flashes of the big guns you could barely see.

Arrow Trims Mailmen, 3 to 1; Panthers Win

Arrow Shirts nosed out in front of the field in the second half Georgia league race when they defeated the strong Postoffice nine by a 3 to 1 count yesterday afternoon at Piedmont Park as Marvin Gaines bested Paul Brock in a neat pitching duel.

The Shirts have two wins and no losses. Charlie Roberts, Jimmy Hargis and Fleming headed the attack for the winners, collecting two hits each. Hargis' pair were doubles. Dick Dodgen's home run in the seventh accounted for the Postoffice tally.

In the only other game reported in the Georgia loop, Panthers jumped back in the win column with a 15 to 3 decision over Fairbourn. Manager Pate's home run with two on started the Panthers on their winning way in the last of the third.

Marcus McWhorter was the star of the day in the Peach league skirmishes. Marcus pitched both games of a double-header for Adair Park against Kirkwood and was victorious in both, 26 to 3 and 16 to 6. The first game, a playoff, gave Adair the first half league championship, while the nightcap win kept the Parkmen in a first-place tie with the Rebels in the final chase.

The Rebels bumped Grant Park Aces out of a first-place tie with a 7 to 5 win. Bill Perrin's Dorcht Bakery club tamed Oakland City 8 to 5 by scoring all of their runs in a big eight-inning spurge, and Atlantic Sheet Metal registered its first win at the expense of Auto Lite, 10 to 8, in the other league tilt. L. Wise and W. Wix poled home runs for Atlantic Sheet Metal, while Bagwell hit a round-tripper for the losers.

Nazis Reducing Serbia Forces

BARI, Italy, July 30.—(AP)—Germany has withdrawn nearly all first-line troops from Yugoslavia and is reshuffling the remainder to mask new northward movements, a reliable report here said today.

Seventeen German divisions were in the country July 1, but only 10 remain now—all but one of them second-rate units, and the force now opposing Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Partisans by the most liberal estimate is less than 350,000 men, the report said.

Besides the 10 German units, this force includes an Albanian and three Bulgarian divisions, and scattered Quisling units under such leadership as that of the Croatian Dr. Ante Pavelic, and Field Marshal Nedic.

Field Marshal Von Weichs, Nazi commander of operations in Yugoslavia, Albania and Greece, is said to have moved his headquarters northward from Belgrade to Zagreb, and Lt. Gen. Von Kuebler, commander in Yugoslavia, likewise is reported to have switched to the Croatian capital.

The German air force, which has 75 to 100 fighter planes scattered over a half dozen fields within the country, is said to have established new headquarters at Borovo on the Danube, 35 miles south of the Hungarian frontier.

In addition, commanders of the Dalmatian coast garrisons from Fiume and the southern port of Kotor have received instructions to cancel all contracts for use of buildings and warehouses and to operate henceforth on a day-to-day basis.

BEFORE TRAGEDY STRUCK—This view of part of the crowd which yesterday thronged the Atlanta Army Air Base during observance of open house, marking the 37th anniversary of the Army Air Force, was taken before a small plane crashed, killing an enlisted man and critically injuring the officer who was piloting the ship. Noboil Saves Soap, Time and Effort in Many Atlanta Homes

Ample Supply Available at Many Grocers

Noboil has long been a favorite wash-day aid among Atlanta women, because this pure, full-strength bleach whitens clothes gently and safely without boiling or hard rubbing. It removes stubborn stains, scorch spots and mildew without the slightest injury to the most delicate fabrics. Its popularity, however, doesn't end with wash-day for its many uses have made it a daily household necessity in thousands of homes.

It is fine for washing and sterilizing dishes, glasses and silverware. It keeps dishrags white and helps to deodorize and clean drains. Noboil lightens household cleaning chores and when used according to directions it effects a big saving in soap.

Although Noboil, it is claimed, is non-poisonous to humans and animals, it is quick death to germs. This germicidal quality makes it a "must" in sick room or nursery. It is one of the most economical germicides and disinfectants to be had for sterilizing and deodorizing utensils, rubber sheets, urinals, bedpans and sputum cups.

RELIEVES ATHLETE'S FOOT
Noboil has become widely known for the quick relief it gives to tired, swollen, itchy feet. It is a most economical and satisfactory remedy for athlete's foot. Those bothered with this troublesome foot ailment should try a Noboil foot bath. Simply mix one half cup of Noboil to one gallon of warm water, soak feet 10 to 15 minutes. The Noboil solution quickly penetrates the outer layer of skin and destroys the parasitic germ which causes all the trouble. Noboil is made right here in Atlanta which insures its freshness. Freshness is most important to all bleaches because the germicidal and bleaching qualities diminish with age. Therefore, to avoid disappointment in a bleach always insist on Noboil. It is for sale at all leading grocers for only 12c for a full quart. An ample supply is available to all leading independent grocers so if your grocer's supply is temporarily out when you ask for it, tell him to call the Atlanta plant, Jackson 2524, and his stock will be quickly replenished. Insist on Noboil in the big brown bottle with the yellow label.

PICTURED HERE is a typical display of Noboil, Atlanta's favorite bleach-germicide and disinfectant. Noboil is widely known for its purity and quick acting qualities. Noboil is easily distinguished by the bright colored yellow label on the big brown bottle. Look for and insist on genuine full-strength Noboil at all leading grocers.

Awtry-Lowndes Now Beginning Their 29th Year

By PRESS HUDDLESTON
On this, the beginning of their 29th year of a most successful operation of their business, Awtry & Lowndes, funeral directors, are receiving the congratulations of a host of friends and the acclaim of many scores of patrons whom they have faithfully and well served in the more than a quarter of a century they have been associated together.

This year of 1944 marks a new milestone not only in their business career, but in the holding of close friendships between the two men who comprise the firm. Many years ago they met at a service in the Baptist Tabernacle, in which Mr. Awtry was an official and Frank B. Lowndes an attendant at the service. Mr. Lowndes at that time had had considerable experience as a funeral director.

At this funeral the two decided on a partnership, which took form on June 1, 1916. They first occupied a building at the corner of Ellis and Carnegie way, and there the first funeral service was conducted by them on June 29. In 1922 the patronage had increased to the extent that larger quarters were needed, and it was then they moved to their present home.

Today the firm occupies a splendid home at 21 Cain street, N. W., where every convenience is afforded those who have occasion to patronize them.

In their present home, which has been enlarged from time to time, there is a handsome chapel seating about 300. It is air conditioned and always comfortable. There is also arranged private parking adjoining the home, where attendants can place their cars in proper order for a funeral procession.

The prestige this firm has built and the splendid and helpful operation of their business in these many past years can be well appreciated when the policy of the firm, so well enunciated by Joseph W. Awtry, and practiced during the life of the concern, is understood.

"The day is past," Mr. Awtry asserts, "when the funeral director's conception of his duty was merely the burial of the dead. We believe and feel our duty is not done if we have not been helpful to those bereaved during their hours of sadness, and to this end we aspire to render a service that it, at once, helpful, uplifting to downcast spirits, and dignified.

A new, special custom-built ambulance is operated by the firm. The ambulance is handsome in colors of maroon and cream. It is a Cadillac, fireproof in construction, with air mattress, and just as easy riding as it is possible for construction science to make it. The body is all steel, making it most durable and safe.

Old Mattresses Made Over By Imperial Co.

The largest mattress renovating plant in the southeast, the Imperial Bedding Company, at 135 Auburn avenue, is one of the best equipped in the entire nation, and has established an enviable reputation for its high quality work.

This well known company still is rendering the same high type, efficient service in cleaning and renovating mattresses to which Atlantans have been accustomed for many years.

"Present conditions make it essential that mattresses be reconditioned early before deterioration becomes too great," said T. H. Moore, owner of the company. "Despite the fact that the supply of coverings is limited, we still have a fairly good selection of materials and patterns," he added. "The Imperial Bedding Company has all the necessary machinery for factory rework jobs and employs a staff of skilled specialists, insuring prompt and efficient service. Since innersprings have

Ruben's Shop Deals in Furs To Suit Women

If you are thinking of buying a new fur coat, or have one you would like to have remodeled and made to work practically like new, in the latest style, drop into 222 Loew's Grand Theater building and talk to M. Ruben about it.

Mr. Ruben declares he can re-style and remodel your old one. Only recently Ruben's Fur Shop has received a stock of furs. Mr. Ruben personally selected these furs and states that he has been very fortunate in obtaining furs of all kinds.

The owner and manager of this fur shop, who has been engaged in the fur business for many years—practically all his life—extends a most cordial invitation to the women of Atlanta to visit his place in Loew's Grand Theater building and select your fur coat now and have it laid away until fall. Call him at WALnut 8751 and make an appointment to be shown his attractive line of furs—or just drop in. You will be courteously received.

“When we started for France on D-Day I was scared to death,” Clark said. “No one can truthfully say he wasn't scared. But you get used to it after a while.”

John, old for his 18 years, has been in the Navy 15 months. During his 10 months on sea duty he has crossed the Atlantic 16 or 17 times, he estimates. He has also served in the South Pacific, and on his campaign ribbon he wears a star, denoting service in a major engagement while on convoy duty.

“While you're out there you think constantly about the folks back home,” John said. “You get

Yeoman John Clark, reported missing in action when his ship was sunk in the invasion of Normandy, is home again, wearing the Purple Heart above the three campaign ribbons of his Navy blues.

“It was a miracle,” pretty Mrs. Edith Clark said with conviction, as she smiled proudly at her red-haired son. “We thought John was dead, and when he telephoned from Boston, I was sure I was imagining things.”

But Mrs. Clark wasn't dreaming and five days later John arrived in Atlanta on a 30-day survivor's leave, just five weeks after his mother received the telegram—missing in action.

THROWN 30 FEET IN AIR

“I was aboard the U. S. S. Rich when it was sunk in the channel on D-Day,” John explained. “There were three underwater explosions, presumably mines. The second explosion threw me about 30 feet in the air, and I threw myself into the water because I knew I'd have a better chance there than on the ship if a third explosion occurred.”

About 20 yards away was a PT boat,” he continued. “I was swimming toward it when there was another explosion. That time I passed out, injured internally.”

“My life belt kept me afloat,” Clark said, “and the next thing I knew I was on the PT boat on my way to a naval hospital. We were just half a mile from the coast of France when the Rich was sunk,” he added.

“SCARED” ON D-DAY

“When we started for France on D-Day I was scared to death,” Clark said. “No one can truthfully say he wasn't scared. But you get used to it after a while.”

John, old for his 18 years, has been in the Navy 15 months. During his 10 months on sea duty he has crossed the Atlantic 16 or 17 times, he estimates. He has also served in the South Pacific, and on his campaign ribbon he wears a star, denoting service in a major engagement while on convoy duty.

“While you're out there you think constantly about the folks back home,” John said. “You get homesick, although some of the fellows don't admit it.”

While he is on leave, John says, he's going to rest, visit his girl in Florida, see his relatives and spend a lot of time with his 15-year-old brother. Two other brothers, 18-year-old Tom Dick Clark and 21-year-old William Henry Clark, are serving overseas in the Navy. His brother-in-law, Lt. William B. Wemyss, is in the European theater with an armored division.

Because his mother moved to Atlanta from Washington, D. C., after he left for sea duty, this is John's first visit home. He's quite impressed with the city, but he declares emphatically, “It's too hot!”

“I hope to be transferred to aviation ordnance at the end of my leave,” John said, “and I want to go back overseas. Being in the Navy is a hard life, but it's a wonderful life that you're proud of and glad to be a part of. All of us in the Navy owe a lot to it,” he added, “because no matter how tough things may be, we know we can take it.”

Atlantans Told They May Have To Eat Inferior Grades of Food

The pinch of commodity shortages may further invade the kitchens of Atlanta, and the quality of cuisine may become so reduced that housewives may be forced to develop their culinary arts more intensively if they maintain palatable tables.

This ominous foreboding yesterday was the consensus of market specialists of the U. S. bureau of agricultural economics and produce and meat dealers.

In past months Atlanta has enjoyed select fruits and vegetables, and meat of a quality on a par with other sections, the experts believe, but the demands of the war, cattle feed shortages and other factors may cause a drop in the quality of foodstuffs available for the Atlanta market.

Except for cull peaches, apples and oranges, the latter to a slight degree, Atlantans have had their choice in a wide range of varying quality in most produce and fruits, it was reported.

In recent months, meat has been a problem, but some independent and chain stores which heretofore refused to stock meats below a U. S. “A” grading, may be forced to accept “B” or even “C” grade offerings, packing house operators say.

If producers can not buy grade “A” or grade “A” meat from those who raise cattle and hogs, they must take what they can get, and the growers and consumers will be forced to “do” on what is available, meat men assert.

None of those interviewed wished to be quoted, but all agreed that Atlanta has been as “favored” as any other center of comparable size in the quality of available produce and meats, but all were apprehensive about future quality.

The war, the demands for feeding armies abroad, manpower shortages, transportation problems were listed as major reasons for the projected drop in quality of available products.

Returning Congressmen Face Legislation Holiday

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(AP)—A congress, uneasily watching the need for reconversion legislation grow with every Nazi setback, is supposed to get back to work Tuesday, but can't.

Aged Spinster Shares Home With Bomb Refugees

Symbolic of the spirit of the English in wartime is the 87-year-old spinster of Chester, England, who is sharing her 20-room mansion with a mother and her nine children evacuated from London.

Chap. C. M. Meiere wrote his sister, Mrs. Stella M. Strasser, assistant in the office of the federal court clerk here.

Clap. Meiere wrote that the family, which includes four-month-old triplets, and two sets of twins, was ordered evacuated from London during recent bombing and the spinster offered to share her home, occupied by herself and two maids, with the family to prevent its separation.

A Baptist minister before entering the Army Chaplain Corps, Rev. Meiere formerly was pastor of a Greenwood, S. C. church. He has been assigned to an American hospital in England several months, following a year's service in Iceland.

purpose of "HEROES' PHONE CALLS."

Remember—All the boys you are asked to help have done their bit. It may have been in Italy, in Normandy, or on one of the beaches of the far-flung Pacific.

Whatever they did, and wherever they did it, they were fighting for you—and you—and you!

You can buy a phone call home for them.

You can do your bit at a cost of not less than $3—more if you want to.

This is the kind of opportunity that doesn't come very often, is different, and that the boys will most appreciate.

As indicated previously, the Red Cross will allocate the money and disburse it. But this is not a gift to the Red Cross. It's a gift to "HEROES' PHONE CALLS."

So, make your check payable to "HEROES' PHONE CALLS" and mail it in care of The Atlanta Constitution. Don't wait, but do it now. The boys are arriving in ever-increasing numbers from the battle fronts.

The Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company is now engaged in putting in the necessary equipment at the various hospitals. Now all that's necessary is money to pay for the phone calls.

That means that the boys are waiting on you. So please send in your contributions without delay.

Remember—Make the checks payable to "HEROES' PHONE CALLS" and mail them to The Atlanta Constitution. The Red Cross will then take over and get busy.

Thank you.

Norway to Repay Last Of $25,000,000 Loan

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(AP)—The Norwegian government tomorrow will pay the last installment—$1,239,000—on a $25,000,000 20-year loan contracted in the United States in 1924.

The Royal Norwegian Information Service said Ambassador Wilhelm Morgenstjerne will make the payment to the National City Bank of New York.

Norway arranged two 6 per cent loans, in 1923 and 1924, both due in 20 years. The first, for $20,000,000, was paid off a year ago.

Total amount repaid on the two loans since the Nazi invasion of Norway in April of 1940, the information service said, is about $18,000,000, in addition to interest payments.

Wrong Addresses Delay 10th of Casualty Wires

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(AP)—A tenth of the War Department's messages notifying relatives of the death or injury of soldiers are delayed in delivery because of wrong addresses.

Between 200 and 250 casualty messages are sent each day to the wrong addresses because those are the only ones on file, the War Department said today.

Sometimes the soldiers are careless in reporting home addresses, sometimes addresses are deliberately fictitious for person reasons such as family relationship.

Some old-time, career soldiers have been in the Army so long they have lost all track of relatives. Some simply have no relatives.

Prompt action is necessary in replying to the attractive offers in the Want Ad pages of The Constitution.

Romania Rails, Slav Oil Struck By Sky Raiders

LONDON, July 30.—(AP)—More than 1,000 heavy bombers knifed through low clouds today, ripping a path south of Caumont for the rolling British army offensive in Normandy, and from the south, 500 Mediterranean-based heavyweights smashed the Messerschmitt Aircraft Works at Budapest and railyards and oilfields in Yugoslavia.

Roaring down to unprecedented low levels, big RAF Lancasters and Halifax bombers with fighter cover tore into the enemy at 2,000 feet, shredding the Nazi lines with tons of explosives.

They were followed by waves of U. S. Ninth Air Force Marauders and Havocs, which rained fragmentation bombs on the stunned and demoralized German infantry's field gun positions.

Miserable weather failed to halt the slashing air offensive, but the raiders were obliged to use the pathfinder technique in the concentrated attack, field dispatches said. They were opposed by light flak and apparently no enemy fighters challenged them. One Marauder was missing.

From Italy, U. S. 15th Air Force bombers swarmed over Hungary and Yugoslavia. A Liberator formation smashed at derrick, pumping stations and other installations at the Lipse-Budafapuszia oil field, 30 miles west of Lake Balaton, and heavy black smoke rose from the target area.

Fortresses and Liberators struck heavily at the Duna Works at Budapest, part of a factory system manufacturing Messerschmitt 110's and 410's. The adjacent Tokol air-drome also felt the weight of the attack.

Other Fortress units made for the south railyards at Brod on the Belgrade-Zagreb line in northern Yugoslavia and scored hits on the tracks.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force headquarters announced that its warplanes in the past seven-day period destroyed a total of 221 enemy planes in the air, averaging more than 30 daily, in record operations extending all over southern Europe.

Behind the lines in France Allied aircraft in Normandy strafed the trapped German units between Roncey and St. Denis-le Gast in

He Gave Up

BREHAI, France, July 30.—(AP)—There is a limit to almost everything, including German patience.

Citing an example, Lt. Walter Rapp, of New York city, reports that "all enemy units have been depleted by terrific casualties. Few have any fuel or food—and no morale, either. One German went up to get a reconnaissance car filled with gasoline and found only one barrel left in the dump. When he returned, he found the command post gone, so he gave up."

Second Tactical Air Force struck at a fuel dump a few miles north of Argentan in France later in the day.

At Least 103 Slain In Italian Town For 2 Nazi Deaths

ROME, July 30.—(AP)—Capture of the files of the Fascist police chief at Arezzo, southeast of Florence, disclosed a mass reprisal execution of Italians occurred in the nearby town of Stia last April 11, Allied headquarters announced today.

Headquarters said the documents proved that 1,500 troops of the Hermann Goering division, aided by Fascist civilians, made the townsfolk pay a heavy price for the killing of two Germans by Italian Partisans.

The announcement said 103 bodies, including those of many women and children, were found.

Why Steel will need men after the war

When the war is won, many veterans will look to the great Steel Industry for peacetime jobs. The Steel Industry is prepared to meet the situation.

Countless industries will need steel to build the automobiles, railroad equipment, houses, stoves, refrigerators and thousands of other commodities of peace.

Steel is tough, versatile, low in cost, vital in peace as it is deadly in war...the backbone of transportation, industry, farming and domestic life.

The war has developed new uses for Stainless and other Alloy Steels...improved methods of construction and fabrication...advanced knowledge of heat and corrosion resistance.

To forge, roll, cast and manufacture steel into countless peacetime applications will require many men and women. Steel will continue as one of the nation's greatest industries.

It takes steel to make weapons...

...it will take steel to make jobs

Nickel augments Steel in war and peace

On every front endless streams of ships, tanks, guns and planes are thundering evidence that America's furnaces, mills and industries are producing the goods.

NICKEL in STEEL toughens, strengthens, aids in improving heat and corrosion resistance... makes possible high strength Nickel Alloy Steels, Stainless Steels, and Special Property Nickel Steels which help to give our soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines fighting equipment second to none.

As wartime jobs are completed, Steel will be turned again to its peacetime function of serving man. When that day comes Steel and Nickel will unite in helping to rebuild and replenish a war-torn world.

The International NICKEL Company, Inc.
New York & N. Y.

World's largest miners, smelters and refiners of Nickel and Platinum metals... sole producers of MONEL... producers of other high-Nickel alloys.

RICH'S

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, Friday—Now that I am back at Hyde Park, I should like to add some of the details of my visit to Lake Junaluska, which is not very far from Asheville, in North Carolina. Anyone familiar with that country knows that it is very beautiful and the climate delightful, but it is the atmosphere of the whole colony which pleased me. The first thing you see, on a high spot in the grounds, is a great cross which at night is illuminated. They told me that originally, when the cross had been built, the intention was to light it up only during the summer when the conferences were in session. But the railroad men, who can see it as they pass in the night, grew so fond of it that when it was turned off they sent a petition to the board asking that it be lit every night, for it gave them food for thought and inspiration as they drove their engines into the dark.

Of course, I saw more of Mrs. M. E. Tilly, and the various women who are secretaries of the various departments, than of any other people. I liked everyone I met and was grateful to all for their kindness.

I reached Asheville about 9:30 in the morning of July 25. I went at once to the recruiting center for the WACS, and from there for an interview at the local radio station. I enjoyed every minute of the beautiful drive to Lake Junaluska, and the first glimpse of the lake as we came along the mountain road is a sight long to be remembered.

I had time to change for lunch with Mr. and Mrs. William F. Quillian. Afterwards some 30 or 40 women were invited in, and I answered some questions which Mrs. Maud M. Turpin, the public relations secretary, had prepared for this particular group. After another short rest, we started out to see all the points of interest. At the colored center I said a few words, and they sang for me. The Women's Club also was holding a meeting, where we were welcomed and then taken for a short boat ride on the lake. Dr. Lamberth insisted that we must at least have ten minutes on the water, and during those minutes, the children who had crowded aboard were busy having their autograph books signed. Then supper and the big evening meeting in the auditorium.

At a quarter before 8, the following morning, we went over to Waynesboro, where the Chamber of Commerce gave a most delightful breakfast at the country club. Mrs. Charles Tillet, our chairman of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, came over with her daughter and attended most of these meetings. She looked as charming and as fresh as though she had not just returned from attending the national convention. After the breakfast, several of the seminars joined together in a forum at which I spoke. I had time to pack and dress, attend a last luncheon and say a few words of good-bye to all of the kind ladies who made my visit so enjoyable.

Clark Gable Will Star In 'Life of Lucky Baldwin'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS. HOLLYWOOD, July 30.—(INS)—What a picture! Clark Gable, "The Life of Lucky Baldwin," who was one of California's most colorful characters. Louis B. Mayer told me Producer Everett Riskin is now preparing the Baldwin biography for Clark and there are two women of equal importance who were wooed and won by that impetuous gentleman.

Eddie Mannix, who is very enthusiastic over Clark's making this picture, said the story, by Ethel Hill, had been bought from 20th Century-Fox and it had taken months to clear the film rights with the family.

Baldwin owned the first big American racing stable. He liked horses and women, but his actual fortune came from gold mines. The big Baldwin estate is in Arcadia, Cal., and when he died he left a huge fortune to his daughters, Anita Baldwin and Clara Baldwin Stocker. Both are dead.

Being boss of your own movie company is a lot of work, but don't tell me Bing Crosby and Don Ameche aren't having fun with their independent films. Don called me early today to say his first story had been selected. It's "Love Like Ours," a romantic comedy by Gerald Adams and Jon Alan about a returned soldier who discovers his fascinating wife has raised a lot of havoc in the bosom of his family. "The wife's role is as important as mine," says Don. I kidded him by saying: "I thought your first would be a biographical character of some sort." There was no answer from the other end.

Good Fairy" is the whimsical tale of a girl theater usher who falls in love with a man of the upper classes and suddenly finds her dream-world of wealth, champagne and aristocratic living come to life.

IM THE ALM BY PAUL JONES

Pretty Chae Mayse, the honey-haired vocalist who is featured with Bud Waples' band on the Ansley Rainbow Roof each night, will appear as guest artist on Albert Coleman's musical program over WSB at 5 p. m. today.

Chae's voice closely resembles that of Screen Singer Dinah Shore. Many of the GI's who regularly visit the rooftop night spot compliment her on the similarity of her vocals with those of the Nashville blues singer, especially when Chae offers a tune from Goldwyn's "Up in Arms."

Coleman plans to have as his guest next week Vic Hyde, the one-man band who counts among his various accomplishments the playing of four trumpets simultaneously.

Josef Hofman, world renowned pianist who made his American debut almost 60 years ago, will appear as guest artist on the Telephone Hour at 8 p. m. today over WSB.

The pianist's portion of the program will open with a melody familiar and beloved by all. It's Beethoven's Sonata No. 14 in C Sharp Minor—the "Moonlight Sonata." As his second and final selection, Hofmann will turn to the composer Chopin. He will play the last movement of that composer's Concerto in E Major.

Beautiful Deanna Durbin and Frederic March will be costarred in an adaptation of Ferenc Molnar's play, "The Good Fairy," when the Screen Guild Players perform again at 9 p. m. today over WGST.

Worry Clinic

By GEORGE CRANE.

(Success in this modern, competitive age depends on technical training, PLUS. And the "plus" factor is a keen understanding of applied psychology. The best trained doctor in the world will go on relief if he doesn't learn how to motivate people successfully. Since the professional schools omit a course in applied psychology, your progressive editor tries to make up for such omission by giving you this psychology feature.)

CASE D-213: Clyde V., aged 39, is an unusually successful dentist. "My office is so crowded with patients that I have had to limit myself to a 15-minute lunch hour," he admitted.

"It isn't that I have so much technical skill, either, but only that I have learned the art of motivating people. "When I was in college, I became interested in magic and indulged in sleight-of-hand tricks as a hobby. Furthermore, I won a couple of letters in track."

"After I opened my office, I found that the general public never asked a word about whether I had made an 'A' average versus a 'C' average in dental school. "They didn't inquire where I stood on the state board examinations. Most of them don't seem to know or care whether I attend post-graduate clinics."

PSYCHOLOGY IN DENTISTRY "I could have studied in European clinics and have had twice the technical training of my colleagues in this city, but I could still have starved for lack of patients. "But I soon found that my sleight-of-hand tricks did me more good than my year of graduate study in dentistry."

"When children came to my office, I usually performed a couple of magic tricks. "They liked a doctor who would thus appeal to their basic interests. Soon they began stopping at my office with their schoolmates, even though they weren't scheduled for any dental work. But they would ask me to please show their friends some of my tricks."

"The whole of the latter needed dental care, they asked their parents to let them come to my office. "In this manner, I soon recruited a large practice. Some of my colleagues told me it was because I studied in post graduate clinics more than they did, but most of my patients don't know that fact."

"With the high school young fellows, I can discuss athletics and show a he-man set of muscles. It impresses them, and they like me. "I am in hearty agreement with a statement you recently made in your Worry Clinic column. You said that success in this modern world demands technical training, PLUS. And that plus value you defined as an understanding of applied psychology. It is true."

DOCTORS' PSYCHOLOGY During the depth of the depression, I addressed the Brooklyn Dental Society. Its president informed me that 200 dentists in Brooklyn alone were on relief at that time and an even greater number of physicians!

These professional men had graduated from first-class dental and medical colleges. They had credentialed passed their state board examinations. They were thus very well trained as far as technical dentistry or medicine is concerned, but they had not been taught applied psychology.

It would be a great boon to professional men if their colleges offered them at least one semester of practical psychology, included in which might even be a few tricks and other attention attractors for use on children. Our professional schools still are woefully myopic, believing that if you are a good dentist or physician in technical skill, your office will be flooded with patients. The Brooklyn situation just described, refutes this old "mouse-trap" theory.

Because hats are getting bulkier and more decorative, hair must be styled extremely neat and simple. The page-boy is back, not the down-on-the-shoulders version of several years past, but a shorter, modified version as seen in the photograph. This and the chignon, (knot placed low at the back of the neck) in a net, were most often seen with the new hats in the recent millinery shows in New York.

Latest in WAC Uniforms Worn Here by Lt. Kempton

By YOLANDE GWIN.

G. I. may mean Government issue to the men folk, but to the WAC members here who have seen Lt. Grace Kempton, now stationed in Washington, the term may now be interpreted to mean a Glamorous Inspiration.

For when Lt. Kempton arrived here during the weekend to spend a leave with her husband, Willett Kempton, she presented a snappy appearance in her tropical wool garb and uniform and just one of the reasons was that "something new had been added."

The "something new" was the yellow cotton jersey scarf and cotton gloves which she wore and which gave the WACS here a decided flutter of excitement for what woman, whether she be in uniform or a civilian, doesn't bow to the dictates of Dame Fashion? And what woman, in service or in civilian life doesn't want to appear in the latest style, even though it be just the addition of a scarf and gloves? Lt. Kempton direct from the nation's capital where she is attached to the Army services forces, found that a mere addition of a scarf and a pair of yellow gloves to her WAC uniform resulted in comment, compliments, questions as to "regulations" and information as to where orders could be placed. Assuring WAC friends here as well as those who took the liberty of stopping her on the street and in restaurants that the yellow gloves and scarf were definitely regulation, Lt. Kempton suddenly found herself in the role of a saleswoman for WACS begged her to accept orders for them to be sent immediately upon her return to Washington this evening.

Lt. Kempton who is editorial coordinator for the WAC for the Army Information Branch in the Office of the Moral Services Division, has that enviable faculty for getting a thrill out of doing things for other people. Yesterday she carefully listed the names, ranks, companies, etc. of the WACS who gave her their order so that her soldier sisters here could have the latest in WAC wardrobe attire.

Good old Uncle Sam, even with a world war on his hands, has time to look after his girls, and close on the heels of Lt. Kempton's appearance here it was announced that WAC scarves and gloves could be obtained at the post exchange at Fort McPherson.

Three-Week Romance Leads Couple Along Bridal Trail

By MARGARET STOVALL.

"Even the war with its rationing, crowded conditions and scarcities of this and that, has its compensations," mused Mrs. W. P. Skelton as she sat in the society department of The Atlanta Constitution, when she came to announce her recent marriage.

"Three weeks ago as Miss Ione Hopkins," she explained, "I was living alone and liking it. But everyone kept saying that if we had spare rooms we should rent them, because of the scarcity, the lack of houses, and the crowded conditions caused by Atlanta's many war plants and industries. So I placed an ad in the newspaper to the effect that I had a room for rent."

Georgia Servicemen Laying Postwar Plans

By F. M. WILLIAMS.

American servicemen, especially those in the Navy, think training given them while in uniform will enable them to improve their standard of civilian life and few expect difficulties in resuming normal civilian life.

These facts were disclosed by Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia, who announced the results of a university survey to determine postwar plans of Georgia students. The survey was conducted by Mrs. Dorothy Cromartie, a senior in sociology from Athens, and Miss Gene Drexel, psychology senior, from Tifton.

One hundred service men were interviewed—50 from the Army and 50 from the Navy. Half of them have spent combat duty and half have spent their service in the United States.

Ninety per cent of the men, with or without combat service, emphasized the desire to be a burden on the country and they do not want special privileges.

They favor loans rather than gratuities and the majority think the government should offer small loans to re-establish business and farms.

One of the most significant findings, Miss Drexel revealed, is the supreme confidence of the boys in the Navy that there will be less change for them in civilian life because they think they will find employment after the war in fields for which they have been prepared while in service.

Men in the Army who have served overseas were found to be very confident or almost without confidence as to their ability to adjust themselves as civilians, but this group generally expects less governmental aid than boys who have not seen foreign duty.

Both those with overseas service and those without favor vocational education and those who plan to return to civilian life want to stop being GI Joe's just as soon as possible and settle down to being normal and average citizens.

CIVILIANS IN UNIFORM

Of the men questioned who have not been overseas, only nine plan to stay in service. "They are really civilians in uniform and frankly say so," Mrs. Cromartie said. "It is evident they expect to return to old jobs or go back to school."

All the boys favor vocational education, but those with overseas duty are less inclined to return to college for diplomas.

Average age of those interviewed was 23.4 years and average length of service was 2.66 years. While the interviews were done in Georgia, the men came from all parts of the nation.

Miss Mary Ziegler, associate professor of psychology, supervised the survey.

Marine Pilot of Atlanta Sank Japanese Transport at Rabaul

By TINA RANSOM.

Bearing one whale of a story—a full 10,000 tons worth—and wearing the Distinguished Flying Cross as well as a great big smile, Lt. Herbert W. "Bert" Atkinson Jr. is back in Atlanta from his 10-month siege with the Japs in the South Pacific.

The DFC is for nothing less than sinking a 10,000-ton Jap transport at Rabaul. "Oh THAT," laughed the 22-year-old Marine pilot, as if sharing a good joke. "It surprised me, too." This seems to be the reaction of the Atlanta member of the famed "Red Devils" squadron, who is visiting his mother, Mrs. Frances Atkinson, of 595 Ashby street, S. W.

It was one day last January that Atkinson, piloting a TBF, and the others in his squadron whirled in to attack a covey of nine Nip transports sitting in the harbor at Rabaul. They were met by furious ack-ack. Roaring in behind an SBD which had just plastered one of the transports with a 2,000-pound bomb, Atkinson, literally skimming the water, loosed his torpedo at the rocking target. Antiaircraft fire jolted his plane as he pulled out at mast height. Below him the torpedo plowed into the Nip vessel amidships, cutting the ship in two with an explosion that nearly knocked the Atlanta pilot out of the air.

THOUGHT HE WAS GONE
"For a moment I was sure we were done for," Atkinson related. "But somehow the plane managed to keep going despite serious damage to her controls. Four of our fighters, seeing me in trouble, flew in and covered me during the flight back to the base.

"With my hydraulics shot away I had to bring the plane in on a prayer. A few trees got in my way and tore the wings off, but miraculously none of us in the plane was hurt."

Before the squadron flew home that day, every one of the nine Jap ships had been disabled or sunk. The mission had been a complete success.

Atkinson also wears the Presidential citation for the wreck the Marines have made of Rabaul. "It was as good as new when we paid our first visit," stated Atkinson, describing the important Jap stronghold which contained five superb air fields. "But when last I saw it, there was nothing left. I've never seen such desolation. The few Japs holding out around there have been completely cut off from all supplies and communication."

"Oh, life out there wasn't too

"I reckon the man was guilty. But that tough little Jeebel was tryin' to spite him because he got tired of her, and I wasn't goin' to help her do it."

Where is the Pitt Diamond Now?

The Pitt diamond, one of history's famous stones, was formerly the property of the French government—and one wonders now whether it has fallen into the hands of the plundering Nazis. None of the legends—by a slave, who successfully concealed it until he could trade it to a sea captain for assistance in escaping his slavery. It went successfully through the hands of Paris merchants... an English governor... a regent of France... and was finally stolen during the French Revolution by thieves who later returned it—because, perhaps, of the difficulties involved in disposing of so precious a possession.
